Strict water rationing in Marin Co.

SAN RAFAEL Calif. (AP) — Starting next Tuesday, most of parched Marin County will come under some of the strictest water rationing in 40 years for 169,000 residents, each limited to 46 gallons a day — about the capacity of an average bathtub.

By order of the directors of the Marin Municipal Water District, which serves the populous county north of San Francisco, the program will reduce water usage by 57 per cent of normal water consumption.

Directors were told district reservoirs will go dry in fall unless winter rains return.

The county is in a "drought crisis of unprecedented proportions," said district General Manager J. Dietrich Stroeh. "If it doesn't rain we'll have mud in our reservoirs by September."

The directors muscled the new directive by doubling the basic water rate from 61 cents to $1.22 per 750 gallons.

Persons who use more than their allocation will pay eight times the basic rate or $10 per 750 gallons. Those using more than twice their allocation will be hit with a $50 basic rate.

3 states under energy emergencies

East's natural gas supplies rapidly dwindling

By The Associated Press

Ohio, New York and New Jersey were under energy emergencies today as officials sought to conserve dwindling natural gas supplies. Meanwhile, a severe storm bore down on the East with blowing snow and bitter cold that threatened to intensify the gas shortages.

The fuel crisis in the Northeast threatened to add more than 250,000 new layoffs to the ranks of the estimated 400,000 already "energy unemployed."

A blizzard blew across the Midwest this morning, halting ground and air traffic and forcing numerous schools to close in Indiana and lower Michigan, where visibility was down to zero at times due to blowing snow. The temperature at Indianapolis dropped from 20 degrees to 5 degrees in less than an hour.

Ohio and West Virginia braced for the storm's arrival later in the day and officials in West Virginia said it had the potential of paralyzing the state.

Ohio Gov. James A. Rhodes, who on Thursday declared an "energy crisis" in the state, ordered state employes to go home and asked all businesses and nonessential services in the state to close by noon as the storm approached.

"We want people to get home and off the streets and highways as soon as possible today because of the threat of blizzard conditions and possibly the most severe cold spell of the entire winter," Rhodes said.

Public Service Electric & Gas Co., New Jersey's largest utility, shut off virtually all natural gas service today for 2,500 industrial and commercial customers until at least Tuesday. PSE&G was the fourth and last of the state's major gas companies to stop service for its big customers. The cutbacks have forced the layoffs of thousands of factory workers.

A spokesman for PSE&G also urged households to turn down heat, saying "We'll all be out of gas" if the pipeline system loses pressure.

The energy crisis across the East and Midwest began last week when another wave of snow and record low temperatures moved as far south as Florida.

The governors of Florida, Pennsylvania and Tennessee have asked President Carter to declare their states disaster areas.

In Washington, Congress was scheduled today to take up Carter's emergency energy proposal that would give him power to redirect natural gas supplies to energy-starved areas.

The unusually cold weather east of the Rocky Mountains has already closed some 4,000 plants and caused the 400,000 layoffs, according to federal energy officials. Officials in several states said they expect applications for unemployment benefits to soar because of the layoffs.

Elsewhere, officials in Philadelphia declared a state of emergency Thursday because of natural gas shortages; the Mississippi, Ohio and Illinois rivers were frozen and barges carrying heating oil and other supplies were locked in ice, and temperatures hit minus 30 in North Dakota and Minnesota. Kentucky agriculture officials estimated animal deaths, production losses and high feed bills were costing farmers $2 million daily.

TV's 'Chico' shoots himself

Depressed young actor 'critical' with head wound

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian Freddie Prinze, the 22-year-old star of the hit television series "Chico and the Man," was in critical condition today with a bullet wound in the head following an apparent suicide attempt, police said.

Lt. Dan Cooke said Prinze had been despondent Thursday night over the break-up of his marriage and several friends and his psychiatrist had tried to cheer the actor up.

"All of a sudden, he reached down into the sofa, pulled out an automatic pistol, and shot himself in the head," Cooke said.

A note was found, Cooke said, but it did not specifically mention Prinze' marital problems.

The shooting occurred about 3:30 a.m. in Prinze' suite at the plush Beverly Comstock hotel in West Los Angeles. Prinze had been staying there since he and his wife, Katherine, filed for divorce last month.

They were married in Las Vegas in October 1975 and have a 10-month-old son, Freddie. It was his first marriage and her third.

James Komack, the creator and executive producer of "Chico and the Man," said he had been with Prinze early Thursday evening in Komack's home. He said Prinze gave no hint of personal problems and said the actor didn't "leave here suicidal."

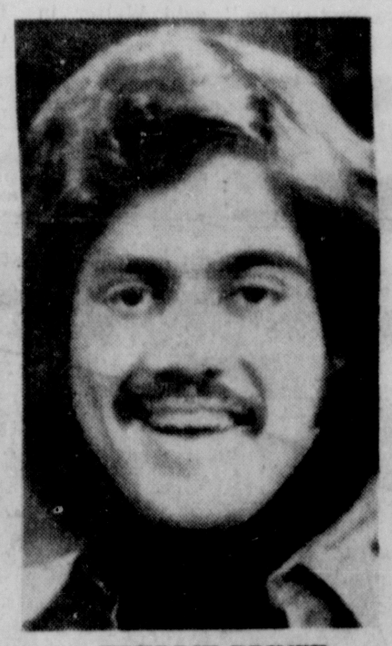
But when he returned to his hotel, Cooke said, he called his parents and several friends, telling them he was depressed.

Prinze' secretary and his psychiatrist went to the hotel to try to cheer up Prinze, Cooke said. They left about 2 a.m. but other persons remained and were in the room when the shooting occured.

Paramedics who took the actor to the hospital said his condition was so unstable it was a half-hour before they were able to move him.

Four weeks ago, Prinze pleaded innocent to a charge of driving under the influence of drugs. He was arrested Nov. 5 in Van Nuys and is scheduled to appear in court Feb. 28.

Prinze, part Puerto Rican and part Hungarian, traded heavily on his ethnic background in his routines. He grew up in New York City and got his break three years ago when he appeared on the "Tonight Show" and was spotted by Komack.



FREDDIE PRINZE
... shot in head

Jack Albertson, who co-starred with Prinze in the comedy series, said in an interview with radio station KNX here early today that he couldn't understand why Prinze tried to kill himself.

"I can't see any reason except that there seems to be a pattern among young people who achieve success so early that there's a destructive thing on their part."

The veteran actor said while he and Prinze "were every fond of each other, he was very close-mouthed about his activities and problems." But he said Prinze's impending divorce "was preying on his mind."

He said problems Prinze had had with his former manager, and his arrest last November on a misdemeanor charge of driving under the influence of drugs also may have been factors in Prinze's action.

"All these things, I guess, more or less piled up," he said.

City woman, Covina man arrested on drug charges

A three-week investigation by state narcotics agents and Pomona police drug investigators led to the arrest of a Covina man and a Pomona woman on cocaine sale charges.

The Covina man, 21-year-old Keith Richard Seffer, was arrested Thursday at Cal Poly where he is a student, Detective Larry Todd, Pomona police narcotics officer said. The woman, 25-year-old Dana Lee Edgington, was arrested at her home at 1118 E. Franklin Ave.

Todd said that prior to the arrests, officers bought eight grams of cocaine from the couple for $85 per gram. Todd said the investigation began after police received information that the two persons were suspected of dealing in cocaine in the area.

New violence shakes Spain

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Gunmen today killed five policemen and injured three, police said, in simultaneous attacks on suburban post offices that shook Spain.

Premier Adolfo Suarez called his cabinet into emergency session to deal with the worst crisis his government has faced as it attempts to restore democracy to post-Franco Spain. All political extremists were ordered arrested for questioning.

The government had already imposed emergency measures Thursday aimed at ending a wave of violence that resulted in seven deaths earlier this week, including five Communists killed by right-wing extremists.

In today's violence, police said two gunmen fatally wounded two uniformed police guards at one postal station, and at almost the same time three men with automatic weapons shot to death two paramilitary civil guards at another substation.

A third civil guard died from injuries received when a jeep arriving at the second shooting scene was raked by machinegun fire, a Civil Guard spokesman said.

Police did not say who was responsible for the killings and nobody claimed responsibility.

FIREMAN SUCCUMBS

Fear 20 dead as fire sweeps 3-story hotel

BRECKENRIDGE, Minn. (AP) — About 20 persons were unaccounted for today after a predawn fire swept through a three-story hotel in temperatures that plunged to 23 below zero.

Three hours after the blaze began in the Stratford Hotel, firemen reported that only one person was known to have escaped. Authorities said none of the other guests had called in to report they were safe.

Authorities said they did not know exactly how many people were registered in the hotel, but authorities estimated about 20.

Fire dispatcher Robert Blackwelder said the fire destroyed the hotel in downtown Brenkenridge, a community of 4,200 on the Minnesota-North Dakota border.

Blackwelder said the man who escaped was Douglas Johnson, whom he described as a veteran railroad worker. He was rescued from a second-floor window by police.

Some of those occupying the hotel were believed to be employes of the Burlington Northern Railroad.

Among the missing was the owner and operator, Catherine Stade, a widow believed in her 80s.

The smoldering ruins dropped into the basement, and Blackwelder said it probably would be several hours before firemen could get into the wreckage to look for bodies.

Mayor Hugh Mikkelson theorized that some of the missing persons may have taken refuge in other buildings. The mayor described it as a "railroad hotel" where workers on the Willmar-Breckenridge run often stayed.

About 10 of the 80 firemen who fought the blaze were treated for frostbite, fire officials said.

A coffee shop, auto supply store and insurance-real estate agency housed on the first floor were destroyed, the mayor said.

Court orders new trial for Tony Boyle

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Pennsylvania Supreme Court today ordered a new trial for W. A. "Tony" Boyle, the former United Mine Workers president convicted of murdering UMW insurgent Joseph Yablonski, his wife and daughter.

The court also "reversed" Boyle's prison sentence of three life terms. It was not known immediately if this would result in freeing him.

Boyle, 74, has been in a four-bed, prison hospital ward in Western Penitentiary at Pittsburgh. Doctors say he has a heart ailment that causes chest pains.

Authorities said he attempted suicide with an overdose of sleeping pills in 1973, shortly before his conviction.

In granting a new trial, the high court said the trial court had convicted Boyle improperly in April 1974, by refusing to admit offered testimony of Thomas Kane, an auditor for the federal government.

In his appeal, Boyle conceded that the commonwealth had established that a conspiracy was formed to kill the Yablonskis, but he argued the evidence did not establish that he was a member of that conspiracy.

Arrest 3 suspects

Narcotics agents flash $680,000 in bait money

One of the largest "flashrolls" used in federal drug enforcement history was displayed by narcotics officers in the arrest Thursday night of an Industry couple and a Pico Rivera man, authorities said.

The roll consisted of 6,800 $100 bills, or $680,000 in cash. One federal Drug Enforcement Administration source said it was one of the largest rolls of cash ever used during an investigation.

Federal agents and Los Angeles County sheriff's narcotics officers took part in the four-month investigation which led to the arrest of one suspect at La Verne's Brackett Field and the couple in their Industry home.

The suspects were identified as Anthony Jacobo Jr., 42, of Pico Rivera, a construction worker arrested at the La Verne airport, and Kenneth D. Brooks, 41 and his wife, Virginia, 35. Investigators charged that at the time of his arrest, Jacobo was negotiating with an officer posing as a drug buyer.

Deputies and DEA officers then went to the couple's home where they reportedly seized 12 pounds of high-grade cocaine hidden in a storage shed near the Brooks' property.

Authorities charged that the three suspects had negotiated to sell undercover agents $2 million worth of cocaine.

Haley story 'Roots' is making television history

A portrayal of bondage

LeVar Burton portrays Kunta Kinte in the TV blockbuster "Roots."

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Roots" is well on its way to becoming the most watched program in television history — and the most talked about.

Word of mouth has increased its audience every night since its premiere Sunday, when ABC estimated 75 million people tuned in. By its conclusion this Sunday, ABC expects it will pass "Gone With the Wind," the highest-rated TV show to date.

Everywhere, people are talking about "Roots," a portrayal of slavery in which the white man, either casually or deliberately, dehumanizes and brutalizes the black man. The series is based on the book by Alex Haley.

Despite the nudity, violence and language, many schools are encouraging students to watch. Los Angeles schools have distributed hundreds of copies of the book for a study course beginning next week.

In Inkster, Mich., Supt. Cleveland Hammonds said, "I don't find the nudity objectionable. I think the series handled those scenes appropriately."

He said some parents were apprehensive when it was made required viewing, but "We have had no complaints from parents so far."

But in Detroit, Dr. Norman Fuqua, executive deputy superintendent, overruled elementary school teachers who made it required viewing. He said one reason was that it came on too late for young children.

The Los Angeles discotheque Speakeasy posted a sign on its door that it was closed all week because of "Roots." The Calvary United Methodist Church in Atlanta shortened its choir practice so the members could see the show. The Empire State Medical Association in the Bronx, N.Y., reported its patient load dropped during the hours "Roots" was on.

A Sacramento, Calif., restaurant owner complained that business was off 40 per cent. Elsewhere, business was down at movie theaters and restaurants.

Singer Barry Manilow said he wished he could cancel his Sunday night concert in Cincinnati so that he could watch the conclusion.

"Roots" has caused varied reactions across the country, including blame for school racial incidents in Detroit and Harrisburg, Pa.

"What a good thing it is," said Henry Dotson, president of the Los Angeles chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. "It's timely, well-written. It's prolific and people don't want to miss it. I had to cut short a committee meeting so people could go home to watch it."

David Duke, head of Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, called the program "highly inaccurate, a wholly contrived bit of propaganda.

"It's not surprising that it's pulling such a big audience," he said. "The buildup of the book was tremendous.

Bob Jones of Philadelphia, youth director of the NAACP district extending from Delaware to Maine, said reaction was split along age lines, with young people being more hostile.

"The younger people were not aware that this existed." he said. "They didn't know that blacks were once treated this way ... They weren't around when we couldn't eat at a lunch counter or had to sit in the back of a bus or weren't allowed in hotels."

The show was blamed by principal Frank Korkuch for racial trouble in Harrisburg. Shouting "roots, roots," black students pushed and shoved whites. At Detroit's Ford High School, four white students said they had been beaten by black youths yelling "roots, roots."

Dr. Joshua Golden, an associate professor of psychiatry at the UCLA School of Medicine, said he thought "Roots" would have a good effect.

"I think people will be more aware of the injustices that occurred," Dr. Golden said. "Sometimes people feel troubled coming to grips with that, but fundamentally I think it's going to make people more sympathetic to the plight of suppressed minorities."

At least 250 colleges across the country are offering credits for a study course that includes watching the series and reading Haley's book. One school, California State University at Northridge, was swamped by calls.

Detroit attorney Elliott S. Hall said, "I think for the first time the American population can really get exposure to true black history." Hall said he is not a TV fan but "I will see this." Detroit Recorder's Court Judge George Crockett called it "moving."

In Atlanta, the Rev. Bernard Scott Lee, vice president of the Southern Christian Leadership Council, said, "It says directly to black Americans just what we really are. How we wound up in this country and why we are in the condition we are. It says something to those whites who have looked at it. It at least puts the moral question before them in terms of whether they can allow the atrocity that was perpetrated on a people, whether we can allow the plight of these people to continue in 1977."

View of 'agricultural politics'

Cal Poly students meet state legislators

By PATTY HALLIDY
Cal Poly Pomona

Students in the School of Agriculture at Cal Poly Pomona now realize that agriculture desperately needs to get organized and participate in legislation at the state level.

Thirty-five students from Cal Poly and their adviser, Riley C. Walter, participated in a 2-day session on "Agricultural Politics" in Sacramento to obtain first-hand opinions from political leaders.

The concensus of the students is also that there is a need for consumer and environmentalist groups to join with agriculture and work for the same goals.

"Agriculture is the largest industry in the state and yet it has the weakest voice," said Walter in organizing the trip.

"As future leaders in agriculture, these students must realize the problems and learn to solve them in the very near future."

Sen. John Stull, R-38th Dist., which encompasses all of San Diego, Riverside and Imperial counties, warned of problems caused by the severe drought and pending water shortage in Southern California.

"Years ago, agriculture was a potent political force, but due to reapportionment in which population became the factor instead of area in determining the number of representatives, agriculture has lost its political power to the cities," said Stull who is a member of the Senate Agriculture and Water Resources Committee.

"It is extemely hard to get city folks turned on to agriculture," added the senator. "Therefore agriculture, which uses 85 per cent of the water in California, including water which people can't drink, has no power in the government to prevent the drying up of valuable and fertile farmlands."

The senator also stated that there are two main problems which may limit the water supply for everyone. One is the drought in the state now having its driest year in history. The other is the federal and state controversy which "is not in the best interest of California." This controversy stems from the question of control by a federal agency of water within a state's borders.

One of the most powerful men in the legislature, Sen. Albert Rodda, D-5th Dist., dean of the Senate and chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said environmentalist groups must work together with agriculture to solve many of their common problems.

"Many political forces are adversely affecting agriculture yet agriculture is extremely important to California's economy," said Rodda.

He pointed to the effects of pollution on the water supplies and the atmosphere which result in the distruction of some important crops.

In stressing the importance of looking at long-range effects of a situation, Rodda said "People should not become so preoccupied with low prices everywhere that they fail to see that this will put the small businessman out and large monopolistic interests in."

Assemblyman John Thurman, D-30th Dist., chairman of the Assembly Agriculture Committee, said there is a need to prevent additional dams.

"We must have more land used for agriculture. If the government doesn't subsidize sheep and cattle on irrigated land, they may become too expensive for us to eat," warned Thurman.

Thurman discussed the resignation of Tim Wallace as director of the Department of Food and Agriculture and its effect on the structure of the department.

He said the department needed to return to cabinet status rather than remain under the control of general services.

Representing the lobbying side of government, William Steiger, vice president of the California Cattlemen's Association, spoke to the group and reiterated the urgency of agriculture to get properly organized and become effective.

Steiger pointed to the need for more lobbyists in the field of agriculture to better cope with the 3,500 bills per session that are constantly changing. He also suggested sending thank-you letters to helpful legislators.

Another speaker during the conference was Donald Gordon.

Dam impact plan wins court test

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A supplemental Environmental Impact Statement on the planned $203 million Warm Springs Dam near Healdsburg in Northern California is adequate and construction can proceed, a federal judge has ruled.

U.S. District Judge Spencer Williams Thursday refused to issue a permanent injunction against the earth-filled structure to be built in the Russian River Basin.

Opponents had charged an earlier EIS failed to discuss the possible effects of poison minerals in the area and to fully disclose the potential earthquake danger.

The Army Corps of Engineers had suggested two maximum quakes were possible in faults near the dam, 8.3 on the San Andreas and 7.0 on the Healdsburg, basing their analysis on the closest active fault.

Asst. U.S. Atty. Rodney Hamblin told the judge experts believe neither major fault would affect the dam as designed and quake data and design are constantly being reviewed. He noted Oroville, Shasta and other dams had been built on faults.

"Viewed in its entirety it (the supplemental EIS) adequately discusses seismicity in that it alerts planners to all the questions that construction might bring," Williams said.

"Should anything of sufficient major importance arise when, for example, the project is halfway built," he said, "that would be up to the decision makers — the President and Congress — to resolve."

Longer waiting periods ahead

Longer waiting periods between some buses in the valley are in store for evening and weekend riders starting Feb. 27, the Southern California Rapid Transit District announced today.

Statisticians for the RTD have figured out that if the district decreases the number of daily runs on its less crowded buses by about 20 per cent, it could save $7.5 million by the end of the fiscal year in July.

Accordingly, the RTD will decrease services on 82 buses throughout the county on weekends and after 7 p.m.

Board President Byron E. Cook said running fewer buses on the least used lines is the "most painless method" of economizing while maintaining the "integrity of the public transportation system."

District Manager Jack Gilstrap says the district now faces a $17.5 million deficit for next year.

He said only a few lines will be affected in the valley. He pointed out that some services here already was curtailed last month.

Montclair 'civic center' expansion looms, bids readied

By MAE TATE
PB Staff Writer

Montclair residents will enjoy an enclosed patio seting and walkways, the use of the old council chambers for special organization and community meetings and the first public tennis courts with the completion of the expansion program at the Montclair Civic Center.

Mike Milhiser, assistant to the city administrator, reported recently that the City of Montclair will go to bid for the general contracting work on the Civic Center in late February.

The city was among local governmental entities which received a share of the federal appropriation under the Public Works Act of 1976. The Economic Development Administration, which has charge of the $2 billion federal aid to the cities act, approved $790,000 for improvement of the Montclair Civic Center. The total cost of the expansion program is about $846,000, including the "seed money" the city used in preparing the application and design work for the project.

The project should be completed by October 1977.

It will involve some major overhauling and changes at City Hall. The administration, public works and community development buildings will be completely enclosed. The walkways between the present buildings will be shortened to allow for additional space to expand the city clerk's office and create a council office for use by each city council member.

An office for the administrative assistant will be put in next to the present office for the assistant to the city administrator.

The concrete in the present walkway will be ripped out and replaced with fashionable tile. The enclosed area for the general public will also include a waiting area for various city officials and offices and an information and welcome desk for the city receptionist.

The public works department will gain offices for the housing coordinator, building official and planning assistant, a staff room and a custodial supply room.

The old council chambers will be available for community meetings and special civic organization meetings. The chambers will also house the administrative conference room and the duplication services.

The area that is now immediately outside the council chambers is concrete and unsheltered. A new roof will cover the area which will be transformed into a tiled lobby. That lobby will extend around the west corner of the present chambers.

The grassy knoll on the southeast corner of Fremont Avenue and Benito Street will become the location for the new council chambers. The circular building will seat 72 in the audience and there will be room for additional temporary seating.

The members will sit at a raised wooden and curved platform with staff and press tables perpendicular to them.

Two fighted tennis courts will be constructed in the middle of Alma Hofman Park. This will be the first public tennis courts within the city and will supplement the facilities at Montclair High School and Serrano and Vernon junior high schools.

Two enclosed four-wall handball and racquet ball courts will be constructed to the east of the present recreation building.

The recreation department will add new classrooms and office facilities, update the ceramic program with modern kilns and crafts materials, and include a facility for senior citizen activities and programs. There is a possibility that men and women locker rooms, a sauna and weight and exercise rooms will be included in the improvements in the recreation department, but those plans have not been finalized yet.

Milhiser felt that the new Civic Center will more than meet the needs fo the community now and in the future. He said that in 1963 "with the completion of the first Civic Center at least 30 per cent was cut back because of the lack of funds. The federal grant will make it possible to do everything with the new project."

The project, he continued, is a "high mixture of labor intensity activities with a major portion of the project employing people. The new construction will allow us to get masonry, carpentry, electrical and general laborers to work."

"A little bit of lady luck helped us on the grant. And, of course, I hope there was a little staff work that helped also. If we hadn't received the federal grant, we would have recommended to the City Council that we use revenue sharing funds for a lesser expansion.

"In that case, we would have done nothing in recreation. It would have been unlikely that handball and tennis courts would have gotten constructed," Milhiser said.

The estimated start-up date for construction is April.

FUTURE CIVIC CENTER

This architectural rendering by L.D. King Engineers of Ontario shows what the Montclair Civic Center will look like upon completion in October 1977. The city expects to go to bid for the general contracting work by late February. The $790,000 expansion project will involve new offices, an enclosed patio and reception area for the public, handball and tennis courts in the adjacent Alma Hofman Park and new City Council Chambers. The project will be funded by a federal grant from the Public Works Act.

Jailed deaf mutes: a communication problem

NEW YORK (AP) — Ten deaf youths who were branded recently by police as members of an organized deaf gang may instead have been the victims of a chronic communications problem with the hearing world.

After the youths were arrested on Jan. 8 for allegedly trying to set fire to a car, police announced that they belonged to an organized gang of "deaf mutes" known as the Crazy Homicides.

The police account was widely publicized.

But in fact, the Crazy Homicides gang is made up mostly of youths who can hear; the arrested youths said only one of them is in the gang; there is no known gang of deaf youths in New York; and none of those arrested is mute.

Police apparently were left with the impression of gang membership after struggling to get information from the youths.

Critics say such misinformation is the result of police officers' inability to deal with the deaf. They also say the court system is unable to cope. The results, they say, are failures of justice ranging from false arrest to death.

The arresting officer Jan. 8 said he saw the youths jam a folded newspaper into the gasoline tank of a car and light it. He said he pulled the flaming paper from the car before any damage was done.

The youths' version of the story is that most of them walked away from the car when they realized that one of their group was forcing two others to set fire to the paper.

Police and the youths agree that the youths ran off in two groups when the arresting officer and his partner began to chase them. One group was captured and driven to the precinct station; the other group was arrested when they went to the station voluntarily to find out what had happened to their friends.

A police lieutenant who said he knew rudimentary sign language because his daughter is deaf interpreted for the youths at the time of their arrest. He later said none of the youths admitted being gang members.

But the arresting officer, who reported that the group was a gang, said one boy wore a gang jacket, several wore red bandanas and the families of two of the boys expressed concern about gang activity.

Nearly two days after their arrest, the youths communicated for the first time with lawyers and were released from custody.

Interviews with the youths, their families, defense lawyers and others familiar with the case indicate that the youths were together because they attended the same social clubs or schools and shared an interest in basketball.

Only one of the 10 arrested youths admits to being a member of the Crazy Homicides.

Deaf people face many problems in dealing with the criminal justice system. It is often hard for them to give information to police, because the speech of deaf people can be difficult to understand.

A spokesman for the New York City Correction Department said a deaf inmate can easily miss court appearances and visitors because a correction officer shouting his or her name may not know about the disability.

A court employe with long experience in cases of deaf defendants said he has seen many cases of beatings by police officers who either thought they were being ignored by the deaf suspect or who misinterpreted the suspect's action.

There have been cases of deaf persons who were shot by police because they kept running when ordered to halt or because when they reached for a pad and pencil, an officer thought it was a weapon. A deaf person's use of hands or excitement at not understanding what is happening can be misinterpreted as anger.

Emergency law urged in cold crisis

Schlesinger testifies on Carter proposals to meet gas shortage

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House energy adviser James R. Schlesinger urged Congress today to enact President Carter's emergency energy proposals as a "temporary safety net" to meet natural gas shortages spawned by the unusually cold winter.

Schlesinger testified on Carter's plan before a House energy and power subcommittee as the Senate, which waived committee hearings, opened floor debate on the plan.

Because of the severe winter, Schlesinger said, many natural gas systems already have largely depleted the gas storage fields from which they must draw. And in many cases, he said, "we are and have been using the gas that we expected to use in February and March."

While some areas of the country are short of natural gas, other regions have adequate supplies and can help meet the shortages, Schlesinger said. He said legislative authority to shift gas supplies is urgently needed.

The natural gas shortages already have resulted in thousands of plant closings, the presidential adviser testified.

Subcommittee Chairman John Dingell, D-Mich., said in an opening statement that the severe winter, not government policy, is responsible for the natural gas shortages. Dingell said he wants to expedite Carter's legislative proposal and deal with long-term problems of natural gas supply at a later time.

Carter is seeking fast congressional action on his request for authority to deal with the cold-spawned natural gas crisis that has closed schools and businesses in a number of states. His plan would allow allocation of natural gas among interstate pipelines, temporarily remove price controls from some gas and give the President the power to send gas to the areas that most need it.

Currently, the areas hit hardest are the Southeast, the Northeast and parts of the Midwest where unusually cold weather has made shortages worse.

In some areas of the country where temperatures have not been as cold, such as the Pacific Northwest, small emergency supplies of gas are available for transfer. But there is no guarantee that there is enough of a reserve to spread around to all critical areas.

Lawmakers from gas-producing states, who want assurances that the emergency legislation won't foreclose later action on a long-range bill to remove price controls from natural gas, held a strategy session Thursday. They reportedly agreed to try to hold Carter to his campaign promise to support decontrol and have already submitted numerous amendments to the administration plan.

Carter wants jobs for Viet veterans

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, who pardoned Vietnam draft evaders as his first act in office, now wants to give a break to the thousands of jobless Vietnam-era veterans.

Carter's new labor secretary, F. Ray Marshall, announced a $1.3 billion program Thursday to find jobs for 200,000 of the nation's 558,000 unemployed Vietnam-era veterans. The government hopes to create 145,000 public service jobs for veterans, and to persuade business and industry to hire 50,000 to 60,000 more.

The jobs program was endorsed by both the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the American Legion, which last Friday denounced the President for pardoning draft evaders.

A VFW spokesman, asked if the jobs program would blunt that criticism, said: "No. He (Carter) chose to recognize those who ran and broke the law before he chose to recognize those who served honorably."

The jobs plan was linked with the pardons in a 29-page agenda prepared by Carter aides for the President's first six months in office.

Urge swift oil conservation program

PARIS (AP) — The Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development called on the United States and the other non-Communist industrial nations today to launch major oil conservation programs to ward off higher and higher oil prices due to greatly increased consumption.

It also urged large-scale expansion of domestic energy production.

A study made public today by the 24-nation secretariat said unless current trends are modified, the United States and the other countries in the organization will be importing 35 million barrels of oil a day by 1985, 50 per cent more than they do now.

Conservation measures recommended for the 23 Western countries and Japan included letting prices of oil products rise to their world levels, setting vehicle speed limits and vehicle efficiency standards, monitoring industrial conservation efforts, requiring insulation and tightening building codes.

The report said such measures could reduce imports as much as 10.6 million barrels a day by 1985, and more than a third of this could be saved in the United States, which accounts for about 30 per cent of the world's consumption of petroleum products.

To expand domestic production of energy, the report recommended elimination of price controls on crude oil and natural gas to spur the search for new fields, accelerated granting of exploration leases and production licenses, particularly in Alaska, on the North American continental shelf, and in some sectors of the North Sea, and relaxation of environmental requirements for new energy development, particularly coal and nuclear power.

The report estimated that if present trends of energy consumption continue, the non-Communist world will be dependent on the 13 nations of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries for 40.1 million barrels a day, including 35 million imported by the OECD nations, 4.3 million barrels used by the OPEC members themselves and 800,000 barrels by non-OPEC developing countries.

OPEC could probably produce 50.5 million barrels a day, the report said, but it probably won't.

"Then, as now, the margin between the rated capacity and the exporters' desired level of output may be quite large."

Some exporting countries "see the opportunities of future generations in a different light than in industrial societies," they explained. The oil exporters worry that full production will bring in more money than their economies can handle. And they worry about running out of oil.

The gap between exports and demand, the report said, could produce "rapid and costly adjustments by energy consumers throughout the world." These adjustments would threaten the "moderate economic growth that is so vital to the employment of the rising world population, not to say improvement of real standards of living of the peoples of the developing countries."

Oil importers would also be more vulnerable to "deliberate reduction of oil supplies to achieve a political objective of some oil exporters," the report warned.

The OECD's members are the United States, Canada, Japan, Australia and the nations of Western Europe. Its purpose is to promote international economic stability and development and to increase world trade.

Record-high $5.9 billion trade deficit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States wound up 1976 with a $5.9-billion trade deficit even though a surge in exports of manufactured goods helped hold the deficit in December to the smallest in six months, the government said today.

The December trade deficit of $551.4 million compared to a record monthly deficit of $906.2 million for November. The deficit for the full year compared to a $11 billion surplus in 1975.

A deterioration of the 1975 trade balance had been expected this year as a result of the relatively quick recovery of the U.S. economy compared to its trading partners. That increased demand for foreign goods in the United States faster than demand for U.S. exports picked up.

Government officials originally had not expected a defict as large as the one which eventually developed, but they have generally viewed the defict as beneficial. They reason that U.S. imports have helped sustain the economies of trading partners, thus laying the foundation for future expansion of U.S. exports.

But the deficit also has been accompanied by pressure from organized labor and specific industries for trade protection from imports of cars, electronic products, shoes and other products.

Over the year, exports were up by $7.7 billion, or 7 per cent, to $114.8 billion. Imports climbed $24.6 billion, or 26 per cent to $120.7 billion.

The December trade performance was marked by lower oil imports after adjustment for seasonal variations, higher imports of coffee and other food products and stepped up export of U.S. aircraft, electrical equipment and other heavy industrial products.

The volume of oil imported in December actually increased by about 20 million barrels, but because the winter season is traditionally a time for heavy oil use, the seasonal adjustment factors registered a $116.5 million drop in the value of all petroleum imports.

Damage averted by smoke alarm

The high-pitched, steady tone of a smoke alarm alerted residents of an Ontario apartment house Thursday afternoon, thus preventing a serious fire and possibly saving lives, fire officials said.

The apartment at 519 W. Park St. where the alarm sounded was unoccupied. It was the second time in 60 days fire had broken out in that apartment, fire authorities said. Both fires were accidental. Thursday's fire, they said, was started by a discarded cigarette in a trash can.

The loss estimate was $2,200 to the apartment in the four-unit complex. The owner of the complex said he had just installed the smoke detector.

Student robbed on campus

Montclair police this morning are searching for a 16-year-old Montclair High School student who is suspected of beating and robbing another student of his wristwatch Thursday afternoon on the campus.

Sought for questioning in the assault and robbery is a black youth described as being 5 feet 9, 135 to 150 pounds with black hair and brown eyes and wearing a tan leather jacket, levis and platform shoes.

The youth has a large afro haircut and a small goatee.

Police said the youth confronted the other 16-year-old student and beat him about the face and head. The victim was given first aid treatment and later released

Motel owner held up

A man armed with a long-barreled revolver robbed a Pomona motel owner late Thursday night after inquiring about a room, police reported.

The holdup was at the Vogue Motel, 990 W. Mission Blvd., where the man knocked on owner Jayanti K. Patel's office door, asked the price of a room and after giving Patel $15, drew the pistol and demanded all of Patel's cash. After obtaining it the robber fled from the motel, apparently on foot.

He was described as black, about 25, 5 feet 10 weighing 170 pounds. He wore a knit cap, denim jacket and blue jeans.

Wienerschnitzel robbed

A 17-year-old employe at Der Wienerschnitzel, 1382 W. Holt Ave. in Pomona, surrendered the business' cash to a lone gunman shortly after 10 p.m. Thursday.

The victim said the robber approached the service window, pulled a revolver from his waistband and demanded all the money. He got it and fled northbound across Holt Avenue on foot.

The gunman was described as black, about 20, 6 feet tall weighing 160 pounds. He wore a dark jacket and dark trousers.

Coast Federal robbed

Coast Federal Savings and Loan Association at 379 Diamond Bar Blvd. in Diamond Bar was robbed of $827 a few minutes after it was opened for business Thursday morning.

A teller, a Rowland Heights woman, told sheriff's deputies that the man entered at 9:15, walked to her station and threatened her with a .45-caliber pistol. He demanded cash, got it and fled from the place on foot.

Three other tellers working in the office were unaware that a robbery was in progress.

The robber was described as a Latin, between 25 and 30 years old, 5 feet 11 weighing 165 pounds.

Fights to regain driver's license suspended by error

BAY CITY, Mich. (AP) — Because James Bailey got ensnared in the clutches of Michigan bureaucracy, his wife has to wake up at 6 a.m. each weekday, dress their two infant children and drive him to work at a crane manufacturing plant.

But Bailey says he won't give up fighting for the free return of his driver's license, which state officials admit was suspended by mistake but now want him to pay $4 to have restored.

His troubles started last September, when someone was arrested for speeding and driving without a license in the nearby Saginaw County town of Merrill. The motorist gave the name "James Bailey" and an address in Carson City, Mich.

Later, when no one appeared in court to answer the charges, the court notified the secretary of state's office, which controls driver licensing in Michigan.

No one seems to know how, but the court concluded that James Bailey of Bay City was James Bailey of Carson City. Notification of the pending license suspension, originally mailed to Carson City, was returned by the post office because no James Bailey lived there.

On Dec. 18, the Saginaw District Court ordered the Michigan secretary of state's office to suspend the Bay City Bailey's license.

Notified that he was being punished for something he hadn't done, Bailey managed to convince the court he hadn't been in Merrill the day of the violation and had never been to Carson City, about 70 miles southwest of his home.

Properly vindicated — he thought — Bailey was handed two "clearance cards" by the court which were supposed to get his license back.

But the Bay City secretary of state's office manager, Dennis Henley, wanted $2 to process each of the cards. He said the cards indicated the violations were resolved, but not cleared from his record.

"There's nothing I can do," Henley said. "The cards do not indicate the violations were issued in error, only that the cases were settled. The presumption could be that they were settled by guilty pleas."

Jerome Foley, Saginaw district court administrator, advised Bailey to get the situation resolved because the mark on his driving record could make it difficult to obtain insurance. And he said even if he could get coverage, it could be expensive.

A spokesman for the secretary of state said Thursday the Saginaw District Court had been in error.

"Since the Saginaw District Court sent us a court order for his suspension, the only way we can lift it is for the court to order us to lift it," said the spokesman. "The court really took the wrong action by giving him clearance cards. What we need from the court is an order."

Judge rejects plea for seeing eye dog in zoo

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Seeing-eye dogs still won't be allowed inside the San Diego Zoo.

Superior Court Judge Jack R. Levitt rejected the plea of a 35-year-old El Cajon blind woman Wednesday.

"Many places in the zoo present a danger, such as the lion enclosures, and guide dogs have no discerning ability," Levitt said.

The zoo has a written policy banning animals from the outside but provide personal guides for the blind and accommodations for guide dogs to wait.

Melville's 'Whale' sells for $53,000

NEW YORK (AP) — An 1851 London edition of Herman Melville's "The Whale" has been sold for a bid of $53,000, a world record for any work of fiction sold at auction. The book was later published as "Moby Dick."

An American dealer bought the three-volume set which was inscribed by Melville to "Henry Hubbard from his old shipmate and watchmate aboard the good ship Achushnet (alas, wrecked at last on the nor'west). Herman Melville, March 23, 1853, Pittsfield."

Hubbard wrote in a margin of volume three: "not Pit — Backus, his real name. I was in the boat at the time he made the leap overboard. Stubbs — I. Hall real name."

Sotheby Parke Bernet said the previous Melville record, also for the 1851 London edition, was $17,000 in November 1974.

The auction of American books and letters realized $432,165 including $4,600 for a letter from Ernest Hemingway to a friend, William Smith.

It was dated from Paris, March 4, 1925, and signed, for some reason not known, "Immer Miller."

In the eight-page letter, the Nobel-prize winner described "drunken parties with the best painters in Paris" and said his ambition was "to be able to always say just what I want so everybody will get it."

Southern California hospitals looking for more blood donors

By VONNE ROBERTSON
PB Staff Writer

In anticipation of a new law requiring use of all-volunteer donor blood in California starting July 1, Southern California hospitals that previously depended on paid donor blood are ordering heavily from the Red Cross.

"This extra demand is straining the volunteer donor blood supplies that have not yet recovered from the shortage caused by the annual drop in donations during the recent holidays," said John Rinset, blood program chairman for the Pomona Red Cross.

Rinset said that Pomona Valley Community Hospital and other local hospitals have always used the volunteer donor blood and the community has kept abreast of the need for the blood.

But in other parts of Los Angeles and Orange counties served by the regional blood donor program, this has not always been the case. Some hospitals have had to depend on blood purchased from paid donors which did not always meet the high standards of the Red Cross blood.

Complicating the situation is the inclement weather and heavy snow storms in other parts of the country.

Normally, blood can be obtained by California from other areas of the nation.

"Recently, Red Cross here has been asked if it can spare blood for Boston and other hard-hit areas," said Dr. Carroll L. Spurling, director of the Red Cross Regional Blood Program.

Although Red Cross blood collections in the region are averaging about 1,200 pints a day, the hospital demand for blood is rising over that figure, according to Dr. Spurling.

"So far, we know of no emergency blood need that has not been met," Dr. Spurling said. "However, hospital blood bankers and doctors are growing concerned about the slow recovery of local blood supplies."

Red Cross has all its collection equipment scheduled and available to donors daily, but volunteer donor response is not sufficient to meet the hospital orders.

Rinset said that while anyone in good health, who weighs at least 110 pounds and is between the ages of 17 and 66 can donate blood, only three per cent of the population gives blood.

Blood donor centers are open in Pomona every Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday afternoon.

The Pomona Red Cross center, 420 N. Reservoir St., is open Tuesdays from 2 to 6:30 p.m. and Wednesday from 1 to 5:30 p.m. Appointments may be made by calling 629-7455.

The donor center at Pomona Valley Community Hospital is open every Thursday from 12:30 to 5 p.m. and appointments may be made by calling 623-8715.

Hahn wants six-person jury system

By BOB NAGEY
PB Staff Writer

Los Angeles County Supervisor Kenneth Hahn wants to introduce a six-person jury system in California.

He says if such a system could be established it would save the county $5.5 million a year.

The six-person jury, as he sees it, would not abolish the present venire of 12, but would decide minor cases both in civil and in criminal courts.

He asked the rest of the supervisors to approve a resolution asking for federal funds to study the proposal and finance a pilot program, but was reminded by Supervisor James Hayes that before a pilot program could be set up, the state law would have to be changed.

"Twelve is no magic number," Hayes commented,", but it was deemed as a reasonable number hundreds of years ago. I don't believe there can be a study that would force the people to accept six persons on a jury when they want 12."

However, he admitted that the use of six persons, rather than the full 12, had some merit. Hayes, himself a former state assemblyman, said there probably would not be too much difficulty getting such a provision though the legislature.

Right now only 12-juror panels are used in California. But pilot programs are being conducted in other parts of the nation. Hahn says they are not only money savers, but they provide speedier trials.

The federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration says at least 25 municipal courts throughout the nation have each been given $100,000 grants for pilot programs using the smaller panels.

If adopted, the project would allow a reduction of 30 per cent or more in the number of jurors who are called on to serve.

Hahn said the smaller panels could decide such issues as dog bites, spitting on sidewalks, disputes over backyard trees and suits and charges of comparable nature.

Warren may stay in capital

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Assemblyman Charles Warren, D-Los Angeles, went to Washington for the inauguration — and might stay.

Warren is chairman of the powerful Assembly Resources, Land Use and Energy Committee, which had a big hand in creating the state Energy Commission and California's strict nuclear power plant safety laws.

It was reported Thursday that President-elect Jimmy Carter telephoned Warren last Sunday, and Carter's top aide, Hamilton Jordan, called him Wednesday.

The report said no specific post was mentioned, but a possibility could be the directorship of the federal Environmental Protection Agency, or an undersecretary post in the Interior Department.

Confirmation of 76 youths set Saturday

A time of spiritual renewal and commitment will be held Saturday from 1 to 5 p.m. at St. Joseph Catholic Church in Pomona for 76 youths involved in the church's pre-confirmation program.

In the Catholic church, confirmation is the third and last sacrament of initiation into the Christian community.

While most Catholics are baptised in infancy and receive Holy Communion in childhood, confirmation is received by those adults or emerging adults who accept the commitment to follow the "Spirit of God" in a maturing faith.

During the 5 p.m. mass, the youths and their parents will participate in an investiture ceremony. At that time, the candidates will publicly declare a desire to receive the sacrament of confirmation.

A potluck dinner will be held at the parish hall for the candidates and their families following the service.

Renaissance center to open doors

DETROIT (AP) — Renaissance Center, the $330-million privately-financed project to help revitalize the city's downtown area, will have many attractions indoors and out when it opens in the spring — but one it will not have is a baseball field.

With 11,536 specially tinted glass windows in its 72-story hotel and four 39-story office towers, officials say there's little likelihood that the 33-acre riverfront site will provide a diamond for the Little Leaguers or any other baseball teams — and for good reason.

Students help fire victims

Victims of the recent Ontario apartment fire can rest a little easier knowing that students at Imperial Junior High School are on their side.

Members of the Student Council at Imperial voted to help fire victims recently by having an aluminum can drive at the school. The cans were to be collected and taken to the nearest recycle center where they would be paid 17 cents per pound for the crushed aluminum.

The Associated Student Body at Imperial decided to join in the fund raising efforts by offering to match any amount collected in the aluminum can drive. According to Beverly Shroeder, club adviser at Imperial, students collected 103 pounds of aluminum cans.

After the cans had been collected, they had to be crushed and that's where the shop department got involved.

Using shop equipment in Paul Treadway's class, students crushed 103 pounds of aluminum cans, plus five pounds of aluminum trays from the cafeteria.

The idea of collecting aluminum trays from the cafeteria came from Michael and Robert Owens.

After each lunch period they collected the used trays from students and took them home to be washed. The cleaned trays were then brought to the shop for crushing.

Treadway said that a side benefit of collecting aluminum cans in addition to helping the fire victims is it also helps the environment because cans can be recycled for use again saving on natural resources.

Students involved in helping crush the aluminum cans included Regina Myrick, Richard Nava, Jacqueline Nigro, Robert Navarro, Kelly O'Neal, John Nelson, Patricia Ortiz, Royce Olds, Elaine Oswill and Michael Owens.

Other students participating were Cynthia Perez, Rocco Palmisano, Delia Perez, Mark Pauley, Martha Pina, Charles Pilcher, Michael Poveda, Roger Rawski and advisers Kim Lewis and Gary Garcia.

At last count, Treadway figured that students would receive $17.51 for the cans, plus an additional $17.51 from the student body funds.

Rowland dance program

"Noche Internacional" is the theme for the dance program planned Feb. 5, by the Rowland School District Ballet Folklorico.

Nearly 100 students from Rowland schools will perform, beginning at 7:30 p.m. in the Nogales High School gym, 401 S. Nogales St.

Their instructor is Mrs. Esperanza Flores, who travels throughout the school district teaching children of all ages.

Dances will be featured from Mexico, Spain, Portugal, South America, Arabia and Tahiti. Most of the colorful, authentic costumes are handmade by mothers of the performers.

Other entertainment will include an accordian number by Becky Flores, 8, and a piano selection by Mrs. Bertha Perez.

Cost of admission is $2 for adults and teen-agers, and $1.25 for children under 12. Tickets may be purchased at the Nogales High School switchboard or from any student in the Ballet Folklorico.

Coordinator for the show is Gloria Santillan, and master of ceremonies will be Adeline Vacovsky. Others assisting are Toni Romero, audio; Raul Guillan, stage; Ed Pokorny, custodial; and Gerry Davis, ASB adviser. Members of the technical crew are Martin Jimenez, Arnold Mendoza and Gary Mikas.

Register vehicles

It can cost the owner of an average family car an extra $15 for being as little as one day late in registering the vehicle — $45 instead of $30.

A 1977 luxury $10,000 vehicle, for which the first registration renewal charge would be $152, would cost an extra $76 for being late.

Motor vehicles director Herman Sillas cites this simple arithmetic and a reminder that while those long first-of-the-year lines at the Department of Motor Vehicles offices have become relics of the past, so have the previous grace period and graduated penalty fee for late registration.

Present law calls for a stiff 50 per cent penalty, and no grace period.

Sillas urged motorists to avoid penalties by knowing the expiration date of their vehicle's registration, and paying all fees on time.

Under DMV's year-round registration, renewal deadlines occur on a staggered basis each month. Renewal notices are mailed approximately 30 days before a vehicle's registration expires.

DMV Registrar Harold Hammonds advised vehicle owners to read their renewal notices to avoid missing a registration deadline. All renewal fees must be paid in full on or before the expiration date. If a deadline falls on a weekend or holiday, fees may be paid on the first working day after that.

Family physician

Dr. John Terveer of Pomona has completed continuing education requirements to retain active membership in the American Academy of Family Physicians, the national association of family doctors. The Academy formerly was called the American Academy of General Practice.

The requirements call for members to complete a minimum of 150 hours of accredited continuing medical study every three years. Members become eligible for re-election at the end of the third year following their election to membership.

The Academy, the country's second largest national medical association, is the only national medical group that requires members to keep up with medical progress through continuing education.

Food stamps monitored

The food stamp program will be monitoring more closely the sale of ineligible items for food stamps, the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) announced.

Seven area offices nationwide will open in mid-February to handle most of this monitoring for the food stamp program's new compliance branch.

"When retail stores sell ineligible items, they constitute a threat to the integrity of the food stamp program," said Food Stamp Program Director Nancy Snyder. Compliance officers will be working throughout the country to more effectively identify and penalize such violators.

Compliance area offices will be located in New York City; Washington, D.C.; Atlanta, GA.; Memphis, Tenn.; Chicago, Ill.; Dallas, Tex,; and Oakland.

"While we are making an effort to establish a more tightly monitored program through this branch, even one violation can affect a community," said Mrs. Snyder.

Suspected food stamp violations by authorized retailers will be reported to compliance officers by the food stamp field office. If stores are found selling ineligible items for food stamps, they face disqualification from the program. If a compliance review finds documented evidence of criminal activity, the case will be turned over to the Department's Office of Investigation.

Recipients can legally buy any food or seeds and plants to grow food for their own use. They cannot use food stamps to buy nonfood items such as soap, pet food, tobacco, and liquor.

The program is administered through USDA's Food and Nutrition Service, by each state's welfare agency. USDA officials say food stamps enable the 17 million low-income participants to buy more food of greater variety to improve their diets.

Harvey Mudd College wins county grant

By BOB NAGEY
PB Staff Writer

Harvey Mudd College in Claremont has won a $49,149 county grant that will enable professionals working with youths to gain a broader insight into the behavior of juvenile delinquents.

The grant was approved without comment this week by the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors which last week had tabled the request for lack of sufficient information.

Under the proposal, the college's Upward Bound program headed by Octavio Boubion, would train the counselors to observe the actions and attitudes of youthful delinquents and predelinquents in "stress situations" away from home.

Boubion and the counselors will take small groups of boys camping over weekends to study what makes them rebel against society and act aggressively.

He said at least 230 boys will be involved in a nine-month program that starts in the summer.

The groups will be taken to wilderness areas all over the Southland for three to four days at a time and will be accompanied by experienced counselors. The program is a pared down version of the original proposal.

Boubion and the staff of Supervisor Peter Schabarum had been putting the project together for the past 18 months. At first Boubion asked for $132,000 to include not only the cost of the trips and staff time but also equipment. But that figure was sliced to $100,000, then to the present amount.

Boubion said he was planning 25 trips during the nine-month period.

Arden rates 'laureates'

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — The late Florence Nightingale Graham, better known as Elizabeth Arden, will be the first woman to enter the Business Hall of Fame. The Hall of Fame laureates are selected annually by the editors of Fortune magazine.

Living honorees for 1977 are William Blackie, Joyce Clyde Hall, John Jay McCloy and Robert Winship Woodruff. Besides Miss Arden, others to be honored posthumously include Henry John Kaiser, Henry Robinson Luce and Benjamin Franklin.

The Business Hall of Fame was established three years ago by Junior Achievement Inc. of Stamford. The induction ceremony will be Feb. 4, at the 1977 National Business Leadership Conference in Washington, D.C.

Temple Ave. improvement plans sought

By PHYLLIS CANNON
Asst. City Editor

Anticipating there may be federal public works money under the Carter Administration to pay for the work, Walnut City Council Wednesday agreed to ask the county to prepare plans for improvements along Temple Avenue from Grand Avenue to the Mt. San Antonio College stadium.

These improvements, according to City Manager Vern Lawson would include curbs, gutters and sidewalks.

Los Angeles County Flood Control District already has designed a channel to follow parallel to Temple Avenue to handle storm runoff.

Should public works monies be forthcoming, the improvements could be completed with no additional cost to Walnut taxpayers, Lawson explained.

In other actions, the council declared that it was not the intent of its building moratorium to exclude vital facilities to city or county governments and agreed to permit the City of West Covina to erect a water reservoir.

A request from the Girl Scouts to sell cookies in March and April and calendars in November and December without purchasing licenses was approved.

Council denied a request from an out-of-town church to paint addresses on curbs in Walnut.

Staff was instructed to request the county assessor's office to provide an estimate of the assessed valuation of Walnut for 1977-78.

Lawson was given permission to attend the Planning Institute Tuesday through Thursday in Los Angeles and the League of California Cities City Manager's Spring Meeting Feb. 16-18 in Burlingame.

The word "explode" originally meant to drive an actor off the stage by clapping and hooting.

Joyce Brothers

Don't direct spending

DEAR DR. JOYCE BROTHERS: I've always been extremely generous about money with my teenaged stepson and I think he appreciates it. We still don't have a very close relationship but I'm a newcomer and I don't expect that yet. What bothers me is that one of his friends mentioned that my son always pays the bills for everybody. Now, I don't mind paying for my son, but it irritates me to think my money is going for the tabs of the whole school. I consider this throwing money away and I don't know whether or not I should mention it to him. — E.V.

Dear E.V.: I think if a person gives money as a gift, or even as an allowance, the recipient has a right to spend the money in whatever way he or she pleases as long as it isn't breaking any laws. If an adult gives money to a child, he can attempt to guide him in his choices, but beyond that the child should have freedom. The child will learn from his own mistakes and this is part of the value of giving an allowance.

If your stepson is picking up the tab for all his friends, it may be that he needs your help in building his self-image. Usually, the individual who consistently picks up the check is one who is insecure and feels inadequate. Your son may be unconsciously using his money in an attempt to buy the respect and friendship of others. He may feel so inferior that he's afraid if he doesn't pick up the check he may end up alone and rejected.

Your stepson may need professional counseling to help him overcome some of these problems. Often, the child who loses a parent as a result of death or divorce feels that he has been responsible for this loss. This would certainly contribute to feelings of worthlessness and insecurity.

DEAR DR. JOYCE BROTHERS: I'm fed up with being a go-between for my parents. I used to like to visit both of them — in case you haven't already gathered, they're divorced — but lately, they seem to be using me to find out how each feels about the other. It's almost as if it's not me they want to see at all. I've reached a point where I'd like to divorce myself from them. I'd like to take off and live in a commune or try to make it on my own. Since I'm only 15 this would be impossible, especially since I want to go to college. What do you think I can do? — B.E.

Dear B.E.: Level with your parents and don't spare their feelings. You have feelings too and it's important that you and they respect your rights. No person enjoys feeling used. I'm sure your parents are not aware of what they are doing, so it's up to you to enlighten them.

If you feel that for some reason you can't talk about this with them, if you think they'll interrupt before you have a chance to finish, or that you'll weaken because of their feelings, then sit down and write it out. This way you'll have the opportunity to present your views without having emotions get in the way.

Your problem is not uncommon among children of divorced parents. Too often, the youngsters get trapped into doing the communicating between the ex-spouses. Parents may express their anger at each other by fighting over what the child can or can't do, or what is best for his career or his health.

Let your parents know that you love them both, but you want them to respect you enough not to use you to fight their battles.

Before you put your foot down on the gas pedal think about this.

If everybody slowed down to 55 America would save eight and a half million gallons of gasoline a day. We'd save a lot of lives, too. 9400 fewer people died on the highways in 1975 than in 1973, when speed limits were over 55. And if you still think the 55 mph speed limit is something you can take or leave there's one more thing to consider:

SPEED LIMIT 55
It's not just a good idea. It's the law.

Hubler slated as C-CAP guest speaker

Gene Hubler, an instructor for the Upland Recreation Department, will address a meeting of Pomona Base, California Community Alert Patrol (C-CAP) Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Education Center auditorium, 800 S. Garey Ave.

His subject will be "Home Safety and Self Defense."

The meeting is open to the public.

Base Cmdr. Jack Botkin said that the board of directors voted recently to restruct the working procedures of the base.

"In the near future," said Botkin, "the chain of command will be as follows: commander, first vice commander, second vice commander and chief investigator, administration, security and block-to-block coordination."

Botkin said that by changing the structure of the organization it will "greatly increase the efficiency of the base." He said that the junior patrol, now being organized, will be a great asset to the organization. Those between 12 and 18 years old may join the junior patrol.

"We hope to double our patrol and increase the number of block-to-block organizations with the new membership applications received during January and February," Botkin added.

The telephone number of the C-CAP office in the Progress Bulletin building is 623-2555.

C-CAP is a voluntary organization of men and women which serves as eyes and ears for law enforcement agencies in an effort to curb crime in the community. They have no authority to perform police duties.

Valley economy spurred by West End growth

Sales show rise faster than state average

By ED PRATHER
PB Staff Writer

The valley's economy, spurred by the surging growth in the West End communities, continued to rise faster than the state average in the third quarter of 1976.

It was the fourth consecutive quarter economic growth in the valley exceeded statewide growth since the end of the 1974-75 recession.

Total taxable sales for the quarter, released this week by the California Board of Equalization, were $250,974,000 in the nine valley cities, up 16.3 per cent from the same period in 1975.

The statewide average was 12.5 per cent higher than the previous year, and the Southern California growth rate was 12.1 per cent.

While Pomona continued as the leader in taxable sales with just over $91 million, the West End communities of Ontario, Montclair and Upland showed rapid growth, based apparently on the influx of new residents and the continuing housing boom in those cities and to the east in Alta Loma and Cucamonga areas of San Bernardino County.

The three West End communities had a 20 per cent growth rate from the previous year, and accounted for almost half of the entire taxable sales in the valley with a total of $120 million.

The valley growth rate of 16.3 per cent means that the actual volume of goods and services sold here during the quarter was 10 per cent higher than in 1975, discounting the estimated inflation rate of 6 per cent.

Biggest categorical gains around the state, and presumably in the valley as well, were in the sale of lumber and building materials, and the sale of new cars.

Statewide, lumber and building material sales jumped by 31 per cent, while new automobile and truck sales were up 19 per cent.

Sales of mobile homes increased by 36 per cent in California, but experts attributed much of that growth to higher prices rather than increased volume.

Locally, taxable sales for individual cities during the quarter were:

—Chino $15,685,000, up 18.2 per cent from $13,268,000 in 1975.

—Montclair $44,144,000, up 15.8 per cent from $38,091,000.

—Ontario $49,734,000, up 20.7 per cent from $41,185,000.

—Pomona $91,063,000, up 9.2 per cent from $83,377,000.

—Upland $26,159,000, up 26.6 per cent from $20,655,000.

—Claremont $8,765,000, up 27.6 per cent from $6,869,000.

—La Verne $8,072,000, up 38.2 per cent from $5,838,000.

—San Dimas $6,163,000, up 16.8 per cent from $5,274,000.

—Walnut $1,189,000, up 2.8 per cent from $1,156,000.

Despite the 12.5 per cent growth in the state, George M. Reilly, a member of the Board of Equalization, said economists were disappointed over the growth rate, which had been forecast to be much stronger.

Civilian employment in the state hit a record high of 8,764,500 persons, but the statewide unemployment rate during the quarter was 9.7 per cent of the labor force, well ahead of the national average of 7.8 per cent.

Personal income in the state was estimated to be 11.4 per cent higher than the year before, and consumers were spending it and more, as indicated by a 9.8 per cent growth in installment credit debts.

Where has money gone?

Supervisor slams SCAG spending

By BOB NAGEY
PB Staff Writer

The sprawling Southern California Association of Cities has been attacked for its alleged failure to "tell the people what it has been doing with the millions of dollars" in federal aid.

Los Angeles County Supervisor Peter Schabarum says that while he is not charging any "wrongdoings," the people are entitled to know how that money is spent.

"I'm not so sure we are getting our money's worth in Los Angeles County," he declared.

The regional association, whose membership has now gone up to 127 municipalities and six counties of the Southland is 11 years old. It serves as a clearing house as well as a spokesman for issues affecting the welfare of the area. It has taken positions on transportation problems, airport expansions, urban growth, environmental quality, highway controversies including the Foothill Freeway extension, and other matters.

It also receives and distributes federal grants pertaining to those projects.

Schabarum contends that no one, "except maybe the top people up there" has ever been given any accounting of how that money is spent.

"For example, SCAG has been allocating millions of dollars of state and federal funds for transportation during the past years," he said. "I've never seen a breakdown. My own experience has taught me that this is a cumbersome and complex process."

Schabarum wants an accounting that would include the dollars available to each program annually, the agencies and operators to whom those funds were allocated, the funds which were unclaimed, the funds which have been reserved and any funds which still are the cash balances in these allocations.

Schabarum said he also wanted to know the current cash balances of SCAG as well as a "reasonable estimate" of how much each transit agency expects to have actually spent by the end of the present fiscal year.

"I'd like to see a snapshot of the allocations, reserves and the true need for money by the benefiting transit agencies," he added, "as well as all surpluses held by SCAG as of next July 1."

Schabarum as well as the rest of the board has had a running battle with SCAG ever since the state approved a four-county regional air pollution control district here in 1971.

No collection expected in Fontana rift

The California Air Resources Board, meeting Thursday in Los Angeles, said it will not try to collect $15.4 million in pollution fines owed by the Kaiser Steel plant in Fontana.

But, the board added, it will go to court to force the company to clean up its emissions.

The board agreed to send information to the state attorney general, the San Bernardino County district attorney and the Environmental Protection Agency and request legal action to force Kaiser to come up with a definite timetable for remedying its clean air violations.

In November, the board cited evidence from a September inspection that pinned Kaiser as the largest single source of air pollution in the South Coast air basin, emitting 69 per cent of the pollutants.

ARB chairman Tom Quinn said Kaiser's efforts to clean up 1,140 smog violations have been too slow and insufficient.

Kaiser attorney James Good denied Quinn's charges, saying Kaiser is committed through 1979 to a $150 million clean-up program.

In the September inspection, Kaiser was found in violation of more than 1,000 smog regulations.

The San Bernardino County district attorney's office said Thursday that the Fontana plant has been charged with 535 air pollution violations.

Two misdemeanor complaints charged that discharges from the mill's coke ovens were polluting the air.

If convicted, Kaiser would be fined $267,500.

The alleged violations occurred between Sept. 13 and Dec. 28 of last year. Arraignment on these charges was set for Feb. 1.

Special projects discussed

Local trustees study spending, goals

By DAN NIEBRUGGE
PB Staff Writer

The need for greater identification of and follow-up information on special projects in the Pomona Unified School District became visible Thursday evening at a special study session called by board members to investigate funding, operation and goals of some of those projects.

A crowd of well over 100 spectators — many employes and administrators of special projects in the district — forced the meeting to be moved from its original site in the Education Center board room to the multipurpose room at Simons Junior High School. At least a dozen persons wishing to speak on special projects in the district waited and waded through a marathon 3-hour session of reports on 11 special projects in the district.

Administrators reporting on special projects and speakers speaking in behalf of the special projects were often interrupted by applause from a strongly pro-special projects audience. Many spectators had shown up at the meeting in fear a project which they were closely associated with would be canceled or curtailed in some manner, but from the outset board members made it clear no action would be taken Thursday night.

Among the special projects discussed Thursday were the Early Childhood Education (ECE) program, the Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA) Titles I and VI for basic custodial positions in the district as well as youth employment, the Elementary and Secondary Education Act (ESEA) Title I for neglected and disadvantaged students, the Emergency School Aid Act (ESAA) Pilot program, Headstart, the Miller-Unruh individualized reading program, a teacher education project, and the state Environmental Education program.

Of the programs discussed, most intensively examined were ECE, the ESAA Pilot program, the Miller-Unruh reading program and Headstart. While at least one board member noted repeatedly that the meeting was intended only to gain information, a definite atmosphere of adversary relationships between the board and the audience permeated the room.

Although many compliments and informational items were traded back and forth by school officials reporting on ECE, Miller-Unruh or Headstart, it was learned no follow-up program existed to ascertain the success ratio of students involved in these programs. In the case of the eight schools conducting ECE programs, for example, Pat Ramp, coordinator of the project, said there was no comparison evaluation of children in the program with children not in the program. She did say that through ECE's goal of individualized programs, students had progressed in reading — for example — as much as 1.3 years in 10 months whereas before they may have progressed only seven months in a full year.

The report given on the Headstart program outlined several benefits of the program's desire to see a child have positive experiences in school at an early age, but again administrators noted that no follow-up program existed to determine the achievement of the youngsters involved. Several kindergarten teachers were on hand Thursday and all voiced vigorous support for Headstart saying the program was a great help in preparing children for school.

The presentation on the Miller-Unruh reading program again saw board members ask if a follow-up program existed to discover how those in Miller-Unruh schools were doing after leaving the project. Again no follow-up program existed.

Perhaps the most heated discussion of the evening centered around the ESAA Pilot program as trustee Eugene Whitlock attempted to nail down an exact cost per student figure from Pilot House director Johney Brooks. She maintained that an exact cost per student was difficult to reach because the Pilot program involved the student's family as well as the student himself.

Using last year's figures, a cost of $1,116 per pilot student was arrived at as opposed to about $1,200 for a normal student. However, the $1,200 figure refers to an entire year at a regular school. No time frame was given for a student in the Pilot House.

Man jailed after chase

A Pomona man was arrested by police early today and accused of leading them on a chase southbound on Reservoir Street at speeds in excess of 100 miles per hour.

The suspect, Dell Everette Saylor, 29, of 2488 S. Notre Dame Ave., was injured slightly when his car failed to make a turn at Reservoir Street and County Road shortly before 1:45 a.m. and slammed into a curb.

He was taken to Pomona Valley Community Hospital where he was treated for facial injuries and released.

Police said they observed Saylor run several traffic signals on Holt Avenue and Reservoir Street and pursued him when he refused to stop.

He was charged with drunken driving, reckless driving and resisting arrest. Officers said he refused to exit his car after the accident and had to be taken from the vehicle.

Tax assistance set

The annual program offering assistance in filing state and federal income tax returns will begin at the Ontario library on Saturday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

This will continue each Saturday through April 9. The service is free and will be operated in the garden room by volunteers trained by the California Franchise Tax Board and the U.S. Internal Revenue Service.

If leaders' efforts successful

Programs for retarded possible

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fifth and final article by Progress Bulletin staff writer Vonne Robertson on mental health care in the valley.

Coordinated recreational programs for the mentally retarded may become a possibility this year if devoted social and recreational leaders are successful.

Representatives of city and county recreation departments, social workers and interested citizens are now trying to establish coordinated programs in Los Angeles and in San Bernardino counties.

Harry Sipple of the Upland Recreation Department is a leader in developing community programs for the developmentally disabled in the valley.

"Basically, we're offering a dance and an excursion about once every three months," Sipple says.

One of the newest recreation programs in the West End is the Sunshine Soccer League for retarded persons of all ages. The league, formed last fall, fielded four teams during its first season. Organizers are meeting now to formulate plans for a spring league, Sipple said.

A day camp for autistic children held for the first time last summer in Upland will probably be continued next year.

The Ontario Recreation Department offers a summer swim program in De Anza Park and a day camp program for the retarded.

Chaffey College is cooperating in various educational and recreational programs and even provides bus transportation to workshops.

One of the best-publicized recreational programs for the developmentally disabled is the Special Olympics which originally started under sponsorship of the Kennedy Foundation.

Many local hospitals, schools and care centers participate in local competition to select teams and individuals to enter regional and national events. For the past two years, the Pomona and Claremont Red Cross chapters have provided youths to serve as volunteers.

Sipple described a new program which he calls "really great" in which senior citizens will be recruited to serve as a companion and friend to a mentally retarded adult on a one-to-one basis. The program is still being organized.

In San Bernardino County, workers are hoping to establish a regional recreational council, Sipple added.

Los Angeles agencies are also hoping to establish some coordinated program, according to Miss Judy Koerner of the San Gabriel Valley Regional Center for the Developmentally Disabled.

Miss Koerner feels that volunteers are needed if any such program is to be successful.

Recreational programs are also organized for workers in sheltered workshops and for residents of community care and convalescent hospitals, official report.

But all persons working with the developmentally disabled agree that in the area of community recreation, the mentally retarded are still basically ignored.

Public awareness and a willingness to face up to the needs of the developmentally disabled may change this issue as it has changed others.

Public good is served

The execution of Gary Mark Gilmore has by no means ended the debate over capital punishment. On the contrary, it has intensified it.

Since it now appears likely that other states will soon join Utah in resuming executions, and since it is certain that the same people who tried to save Gilmore will redouble their efforts on behalf of the next condemned man whose turn comes around, we can expect a rehashing of the familiar arguments used by those who oppose the death penalty as well as those who support it.

It is time each side ceased trying to prove or justify its position and to refute or convert the other, and time they both focused on the question of what is best for society. If we could eliminate the irrelevant or confusing arguments, perhaps we might find some common meeting ground of agreement.

For one thing, let it be conceded once and for all that there is no conclusive evidence that the death penalty deters potential murders. There probably never can be such evidence, nor does there need to be.

Call it revenge or legalized murder, capital punishment is the legal taking of a person's life in payment for that person's illegal taking of the life of another. It is an act performed by and in the name of society — not lightly or capriciously (although too often so in the past), but as penalty for the willful, unjustified and unextenuated murder of another human being.

At least, that is the way it should be and the way it certainly was in Gilmore's case. That is the way it must be in any and every future case.

Let it also be conceded that our system of justice is far from perfect. The skill of one's defense attorney, or lack of skill, the prejudices of a jury and other factors often determine which man is sentenced to death and which man receives a lesser penalty.

But that is not an argument against capital punishment. It is an argument for making absolutely certain that the trial record and evidence in every capital punishment case are examined and re-examined and every avenue of appeal and review is exhausted before sentence is carried out. And that was also done in Gilmore's case.

There are other reservations about capital punishment, such as the possibility of honest error. You can't bring a dead man back to life, no matter how innocent he may later be proven to have been.

Again this is not an argument against capital punishment, but for the utmost care and caution in its employment.

The only real question is whether the death penalty is a reasonable and appropriate punishment. This generation has answered the question affirmatively, in a majority of the states, and has been seconded by the Supreme Court. Another generation, another court, may very well think otherwise and consider capital punishment to be as barbaric and unacceptable as its opponents say it is.

It is here, however, that the opponents seem to have gone astray. Their last-minute legal maneuverings to stay Gilmore's execution yet another time were an affront to the very thing they seek to defend — the sanctity and dignity of human life.

To say that no man must die no matter what he does is to make no distinction between depravity and decency. It is to value the murderer's life as highly as his victim's, and in so doing to depreciate and debase the latter. It is to flout the sense of justice done — yes, the feeling of satisfaction — with which most Americans seem to have greeted word of Gilmore's death.

In the final analysis, it is this commonly held belief that the greater good of society is served when those who break its supreme moral law are required to pay the supreme penalty that is the only, and only necessary, justification for capital punishment.

Only when that belief changes, as it may be changing, will the issue finally be resolved.

Schools face stormy times

Dear Editor:

It's a stormy time for school employer-employe relations in California. The Rodda Act, the new collective bargaining law, has not brought the labor peace its sponsors promised.

The Bonita Unified School District recently became the second school district in the valley to undergo a strike by its teachers. (Pomona was the first.) Other strikes are threatened. Yet, approximately one-half of the districts haven't had their representation elections yet; until that happens, negotiations cannot even begin in those districts. The controversies and unrest will continue and grow. It's inevitable. Perhaps some explanation will explain why we make such a prediction.

The new collective bargaining law became effective July 1. With its passage, California has joined a majority of states which mandate collective bargaining procedures for public employers and employes. (However, unlike most other states, this act covers only school employes; other public employes are not covered by such legislation.)

The act is very complex. Some of its provisions are confusing because ambiguous language was used. These portions can only be clarified by the California Educational Employment Relations Board (EERB), the courts and by the parties themselves. Thus, all those in public education — and interested parents and citizens — face the demanding task of understanding and adjusting to the many important changes that the Rodda Act has brought and will be bringing about in the next few months and years.

Schools have been singled out for this mandated "trial run" of collective bargaining in the public sector. Yet, schools are the only public agency with mandated revenue limits which control their total income. No school may exceed its revenue limit without voter approval; yet, even with voter approval, no additional monies could be raised until next year — after July 1.

Thus, schools enter the collective bargaining process with no source or possibility of receiving additional income to meet employe expectations and demands. (Even before the passage of the new law, 40 of the 42 unified school districts in Los Angeles County were deficit financing — spending more than they collected; and collective bargaining seldom lowers expenditures.)

Let us use our budget as an example of the problem. We expect to receive an 8.5 per cent increase in income this year. This is based on state procedure that multiplies the average student attendance for the year by our revenue limit, in our case $1,173 per student. Mandated retirement increases will cost 1 per cent — that leaves 7.5 per cent. Increases in health and welfare benefits will cost 1.5 per cent — that leaves 6 per cent. It costs 2.5 per cent to move last year's salary schedules forward one year — that leaves 3.5 per cent. Utilities and insurance increases will cost .5 per cent — that leaves 2.5 per cent. Additional books and supplies will cost .5 per cent — that leaves 2 per cent.

That is how the board arrived at the 2 per cent increase in schedule they granted classified, management and supervisory personnel. That is where the 2 per cent offer came from that was rejected by teachers. The board is not saying that 2 per cent is adequate; it is not saying that 2 per cent is competitive or average. It is merely saying that 2 per cent is all there is available!

To complicate matters, the reserve (emergency) funds of valley school districts are traditionally low; and they are dropping due to deficit spendings. Again, as an example, our reserve has been below 3 per cent during the last few years; and 3 per cent is the state-recommended minimum. A reserve of 5 per cent is recommended.

At any rate, it is in this setting that school districts begin bargaining. It places us in about the same position as General Motors would be if it had to bargain with the United Auto Workers with no reserves, no chance to raise the price of cars and no opportunity to increase productivity.

In light of this, we are pessimistic about the hopes of immediate labor peace in our schools. The "deck is stacked" against reaching agreeable and peaceable solutions. A major factor here is that even though the law was sponsored by the California Teachers Association (CTA), representatives of that organization are not abiding by the provisions of the law — either in restricting teacher demands to the scope of the law or in following impasse procedures in the law. (If they had, we wouldn't have had a strike. Our average teacher would not have lost $93 in wages and benefits. We would not have had the inevitable bitterness and controversy that follows a strike.)

In the meantime, the property tax continues to carry much too large a burden for school financing. Badly-needed, and long overdue, reform is apparently on its way. However, it won't help this year. In the meantime, boards of education are very cognizant of their responsibility to represent the interests of the public in negotiating with employe organizations.

If employe organizations will use the provisions of the law they sponsored — and if the governor and the legislature act on tax and school-finance reform — the "weather" should improve steadily. Otherwise, there are continued "storm warnings" ahead for schools (and school employer-employe relations) in California.

Just in jest

The United States is fast becoming a nation of Super Stars. — First, of course, there's the Super Star Athlete. He's the fellow you hear complaining so bitterly because he is only getting paid $200,000 a year.—Then there's the Super Star Movie Actor. There we have a person who is actually getting paid $200,000 a year but who tells everyone it's half a million. — And finally we come to the Super Star Ordinary Mortal — a most peculiar individual indeed. Can you imagine anyone becoming as ecstatic as he does upon learning his annual salary has been raised to $20,000 a year? — It seems almost un-American.

Pity President Carter! Poor fellow, he is going to have to get the national economy back on its feet all by himself. This year there will be no Bicentennial commercial exploitation to help him out.

Carter vague on economy

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — President Jimmy Carter and his opponents agree that regardless of the size or shape of government job programs, unemployment can be reduced significantly only if business booms.

Business expansion, in turn, depends on confidence and a degree of certainty. Few businessmen invest their money or try new ideas, unless they have some reasonable picture of what lies just ahead.

Mr. Carter thus far is not providing that confidence. He's announced a two-year, multibillion dollar plan for revving up the economy. But he, when questioned, shows himself up as dreadfully vague about what the plan involves. So it is with one Carter proposal after another — when one looks into the details.

During the presidential campaign, the Carter vagueness was taken as strategy devised to alienate no one. But the vagueness on critical details continues — on programs he has announced with some fanfare.

Mr. Carter's vagueness makes one wonder if he will be able to gain control over the vast federal bureaucracy which has over the years acquired so much power over business and industry, and which has such power to affect the economy.

The problem is the laws written by Congress are so contradictory and so loose in language that most decisions on what the laws shall mean in practice are increasingly made by bureaucrats not accountable to the public. Many of these men and women are buried so deep in their bureaus and so insulated by regulations, they are in practice responsible to no one for their mistakes, however disastrous.

The growing power of men and women who cannot be held responsible is making it more and more difficult to predict what the government will do next. The resulting uncertainty makes private decision-makers exceedingly cautious about taking chances in building the new factories, buying the new equipment and expanding old ventures on the scale needed to increase jobs sufficiently to bring unemployment down to reasonable levels in the near future.

To quote a recent newsletter of the First National Bank of Chicago: "Increasing government involvement in business decisions, combined with frequent change of government officials, means that it has become quite difficult for businessmen to make investment plans that stretch beyond the next election. An action that is perfectly legal and apparently profitable at the time it is planned may be illegal or unprofitable by the time it is implemented — solely because of an administrative ruling that changes the basic rules of the game."

It is, of course, this dampening effect the federal bureaucracy has on economic recovery which makes Mr. Carter's promise of reorganization so appealing.

More than the tax dollars saved it would, if successful, do more than anything this reporter has seen yet to restore the confidence required for businesses, large and small, to plan imaginatively for the future.

But one gets no confidence these days from Mr. Carter's apparent ignorance of facts concerning the government he plans to reform.

Equally discouraging is the cold reception Mr. Carter has received in his informal requests to Congress for reorganization powers.

As of now it appears that uncertainty will continue — and that businessmen will go slow and unemployment decline at an exceedingly slow pace.

U.S. still has oil problems

WASHINGTON — Three years after the Arab oil embargo, Washington still hasn't developed a plan to protect the nation from another oil squeeze.

This incredible failure is acknowledged in a secret national security memo, known as Policy Study No. 38, which President Jimmy Carter found waiting for him when he settled into the Oval Office.

The recent cold spell, meanwhile, has put a squeeze on America's dwindling oil and gas reserves, even though there is no embargo.

A year ago, President Gerald Ford ordered his national security adviser, Brent Scowcroft, to set up a task force to find ways "to ensure a reliable supply of required energy imports at reasonable prices over the next five years." The task force was instructed to give special consideration to "influencing pricing and production decisions in exporting nations."

Their report was supposed to be completed by March 15, 1976. But the policymakers kept sending the drafts back for revision. A tentative report was submitted last July. But, according to a secret briefing paper prepared for President Carter, this was also returned "to answer major questions that had been omitted, and a new working outline was developed."

The report still hasn't been "finalized." The briefing paper blames the State Dept. for keeping "overly tight control of the study." The striped-pants set allegedly tried to manipulate the study "to rubber stamp (their) existing international energy initiatives."

This charge has irritated State Dept. officials, who hold the Treasury experts responsible for the delay. "They came up with questions, but they never had any answers," grumped one official.

The State Dept. wants to "lessen the impact" of future oil price increases, according to the briefing paper, by cutting back imports.

But the Treasury Dept. contends that "further arbitrary reductions in the amount of oil we import do not appear economically justified at present." This would merely result in a corresponding cutback in trade and an economic slowdown at home, the Treasury experts warn.

They, therefore, fear "such a policy could inflict higher costs upon the American consumer than the anticipated (oil) prices increases." Treasury officials would rather stockpile oil, as a hedge against an embargo, than reduce imports.

But in the backrooms, the experts are quarreling over who should pay for the strategic petroleum reserves. "If oil for storage is procured domestically," states another briefing paper, "itwill have to be replaced with additional imports." Of course, this would raise prices, and the consumers would get stuck with the cost of building up the stockpile.

But if the government purchased oil for the stockpile directly from foreign sources at world market prices, the taxpayers would wind up paying the bill. Or the government could compel the refiners and importers to establish an industrial reserve. Then the oil companies would have to put up the money, although they likely would collect it back from their customers by raising prices.

The Treasury experts are also toying with the idea of buying "directly from foreign governments," according to the document. If this principle should be applied to all overseas oil purchases, it could save millions by eliminating the oil middlemen.

BURTON'S BROUHAHA: A congressman with a toothache, like a grizzly bear that is out of sorts with the world, is better left alone.

Rep. Phil Burton, D.-Calif., for example, is one of the most amiable men in Congress when his tooth isn't hurting. But the other morning, he set out for the dentist to get a painful chipped tooth repaired. The bitter cold weather didn't improve his disposition.

At a red light, Burton impatiently ordered his driver to make an illegal right turn. The infraction was witnessed by a policeman, who motioned the car to the curb. He approached the congressional vehicle, his face flushed with righteous indignation.

But he was unaware, poor fellow, that he was approaching a grizzly bear of a congressman with a sore tooth. Burton threw open the door, leaned out and began to berate the befuddled cop. "I want your badge number!" bellowed Burton.

The startled policeman never pressed charges, and the congressman completed the journey to the dentist. "It was just one of those crazy things," he told us afterward. Now that his tooth is feeling better, he's sorry about the incident.

CARTER CAPSULES: Now that Jimmy Carter is installed in the White House, his campaign aides have loosened up on some of the campaign secrets. Here are a few stories they are now telling:

— Carter's irrepressible mother, "Miss Lillian," was so painfully frank that campaign aides quietly limited her appearances. They feared she would speak too honestly about some of the pro-segregationist views of the president's father. In New York, for example, her escorts went out of their way to keep her from the press.

— The campaigning Carter family became scattered so far and wide that they used the peripatetic advance men to pass messages to each other. Little Amy Carter, for example, got birthday greetings from her brother Chip, courtesy of an advance man who passed the message on to "Miss Lillian."

—One group that came out with high marks with the Carters was the Charlie Daniels Band. The Carters were so impressed with them that they may want the band to play a concert on the White House lawn.

Think on these things

We cannot in all honesty say we love everyone. Love is defined in so many ways — and used so loosely. But even love and friendship do not escape personality conflicts — and the smallest things become huge in disagreement.

Why must we agonize so over what we do or do not feel about someone? If there isn't a blending of personal vibrations, then why can't we let it roll by? There's probably someone, or several someones, that could do without us — but it's not the end of the world. We don't wish them any harm, but neither do we have to burst upon them with questions of "what have I done?" And certainly, we do not downgrade ourselves for what someone else feels — that's their problem. Anyway, it is usually a matter of timing — not the right time nor the right place, so let it take another cycle to gather a bit more maturity.

Ann Landers

One of these days, you'll see

Dear Ann Landers: I have been married 18 years and there's one thing about George that bugs me.

We attend many conventions because of his business. It seems whenever he is introduced to a good-looking woman, he can't just say, "Pleased to meet you." He has to put his arm around her shoulder and rub her back or give her a hug.

I feel all eyes are on me to see how I'm taking it. Of course I'm embarrassed but I try not to show it. I've told George how I feel about this tasteless behavior but he insists he's just being friendly — that the woman really like it and it does no harm.

I say he should cool it before some gal's husband punches him out. Am I wrong? — Huggy Bea's Wife

Dear Wife: No, but you'll never convince George, so stop trying. One of these days he's going to massage the wrong lady and SHE'LL punch him out. Then maybe he'll cool it.

Dear Ann Landers: I became depressed when I read that letter in your column from the mother who said, "My son-in-law is a bum and my daughter would be a lot better off without him."

Nine out of ten times the daughter knows her husband isn't what she thought he was when she married him, but she just doesn't see divorce as the answer.

I still love my husband even though he can't seem to get it all together. I'd rather work (this is what bugs my mother) and let my guy try to make a go of something he enjoys doing rather than have him be miserable in a higher-paying job just so it will look good to outsiders.

Please let me use your column to say to my mother, "I love you, Mom, in spite of your faults. I hope you will let me love him in spite of HIS faults — and stay out of our marriage."

Thank you, Ann, for giving me the opportunity to speak my mind. — Doing It My Way

Dear D.E.M.W.: I hope your mother (and other mothers who identify) will get your poignant message. But do try to put yourself in her place. Most daughters are unable to appreciate their mothers until they have daughters of their own. Then suddenly so many things become clear.

Dear Ann: I was invited to a dinner party last evening. I always leave a phone number with my children so they can reach me in case of an emergency.

Between the soup and the salad I received a call (big emergency — the kids were fighting over which channel to watch on the color TV). Suddenly I didn't know what to do with my dinner napkin. It was soiled and I didn't want to leave it on the table — so I took it with me. I had a feeling this wasn't right.

What SHOULD a person do with a soiled dinner napkin if he or she must leave the table? Also, is it proper to fold the napkin when the meal is over? Some did, others didn't.

I realize yours isn't an etiquette column, but I figured you'd know the answer. — Okie In Oakland

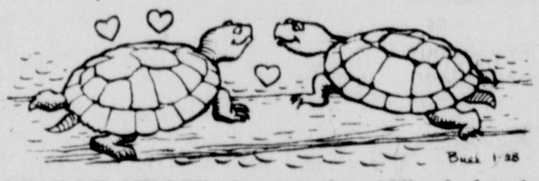
Dear Oak: When one must leave the table during a meal, the napkin should be left on the chair. When the meal is over, the napkin should be crumpled and left at the side of the plate.

Marmaduke

"Okay, what's the bad news?"

Dr. Miller

Can the turtle be pregnant?



DEAR DR. MILLER: It was in the middle of a long hot spell (that was last summer) when I got Cynthia. She was married at the time, or so it seemed, to Fillmore. I kind of thought ever since, she might be pregnant, but nothing's ever come of it. Could a slider turtle become pregnant after this long a time? I suppose that's not a very realistic question. — N.S.

DEAR N.S.: If Cynthia and Fillmore actually did have a torrid turtle affair last summer (I assume of course they are consenting adults), you shouldn't give up on Cynthia as a prospective mother yet. Turtles do do things slowly sometimes, and should conditions be just right, she might yet get around to laying fertile eggs. Those summer moments may be more than a memory since female turtles may store live sperm for several years.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Can mouth-to-mouth artificial respiration be used on a cat? — R.K.

DEAR R.K.: Yes. Use one or both hands to seal the jaws and to form a channel for blowing air through the nostrils. The head must be extended to open the airway. (Note: Practicing this technique on conscious cats can be hazardous . . .).

DEAR DR. MILLER: We haven't the money to do more than we have to with our pets, but we don't want to endanger them either. Currently we're quibbling over how long a cut could be before it would have to be sewed up. — K.D.

DEAR K.D.: A tough question to answer since many factors are involved. One is the disposition of the patient. Some animals fuss with any wound they can reach to such a degree that they'd prevent its healing if it were not sutured and otherwise tended to. The location on the body and whether or not it's infected, or likely to become so, is important. A small, shallow cut on the chest, for example, would be less dangerous to leave unattended than would the same size wound over the back. The back wound would tend to drain into deeper tissues with much more serious consequences if infected. The size of the wound must also be considered in relation to the size of the patient. A cut up to an inch long might, under ideal circumstances, heal without professional attention. Yet a wound that same size in a kitten could be catastrophic unless promptly cared for.

Stamping out the Post Office

Not the least of the problems facing our new President is that money-losing monolith called the U. S. Postal Service, a charitable enterprise that costs the nation several billion dollars a year to have junk mail delivered on time. If General Motors performed with the expensive inefficiency of the Postal Department, we'd still be driving horse-and-buggies. (Horses-and-buggy?)

The Postal Department is no rinky-dink operation — not intentionally, anyway. It has thousands of post offices, employs a million males and femails, and handles and mishandles about 100 billion pieces of mail a year, more than all the other nations of the world combined. If all the postage stamps sold each year were placed end to end, they would encircle the earth 28 times — but who would lick them?

I realize that Mr. Carter gets plenty of advice and suggestions, but in the interests of revitalizing the Postal Department and putting it on a paying basis, I would like to propose that a musical comedy be written — set in a POST OFFICE! Get it? A frolicsome bagatelle that would bring millions in cancellations and make the nation forget such time-honored niftys of the American stage as "Kansas!" "South Atlantic" and "Fiedler on the Roof."

Tentatively entitled "The Postman Always Rings," the show opens in the vast, vaulted sorting room of the Bronx main post office. After the overture by the postal pit band, the chorus of clerks, sorters and supervisors sings the rousing "Mailing With Plenty of Zip!" and performs a comic ballet with carts and mail bags.

A more serious element emerges when the new sorter, Postal Employe No. 81762 shows up, shoulder-length ash blonde hair, smoky blue eyes and a form-fitting jumpsuit out of Bergdof Goodman. A girl. She sings the haunting, "Where Is the Male Man for Me?"

Immediately taken with the newcomer is burly Post L. Service, supervisor of second-class Brooklyn mail. Melissa, however, does not return his interest and shudders at his coarse overtures behind the metered postage rack, for she only has eyes for the handsome young Algernon ("Zip") Code, he of the unruly red hair and cleft chin, ace carrier of 125th Street west of Lexington. The lovers sing the charming duet, "You May Be Just a Post Card, But You're First Class With Me," while Service vents his spleen on the packages in the "Fragile — Handle With Care" bin.

A humorous interlude is provided when Bertha ("Two-ton") Maroskovitch gets her hand caught in the cancelling machine and loses two fingers. She is consoled by portly Spesh L. Delivery, Stuyvesant Park route driver, and they sing the riotous "We're Junk Mail Junkies."

Things then begin to go badly for young Code in his pursuit of the fair Melissa. A sheaf of uncancelled money orders is found in his locker. A pouch full of Sears Roebuck catalogues turns up in the trunk of his car. Postal inspectors discover in the glove compartment of his car a smoking revolver and a half-empty bottle of whiskey. Things look bad for our hero, and they don't look a lot better when the feds handcuff him and lead him off to the slammer.

Supervisor Service looms beside Melissa as her lover is led off easily.

"He ought to get off wit' not more than 10 years, baby," he leers. "Meanwhile, what's a goil like you doin' in a nice post office like this?"

Melissa smiles tenderly and hurls herself into his arms. After an ardent embrace he says "Y'know, honey, I put them things in the kid's locker and car myself."

"I know you did," she whispers shyly. "I saw you."

Melissa and Service then sing the romantic ballad, "My Love Letters Were Postage Due," and the chorus of carriers and clerks comes on for a reprise of "Mailing With Plenty of Zip!"

As the curtain falls, the audience goes into hysterics and the Postal Service goes into bankruptcy.

The prejudice about height

When you want to know a man's height, you never ask. "How short are you?" but invariably, "How tall are you?" A Cleveland scholar insists this is simple proof that just as there are prejudices called racism and sexism, so is there a prejudice that might be called heightism.

Q. "Who said, 'A man's home is his castle'?"

A. Credit a Chief Justice of England named Sir Edward Coke with that one. He may not have said it first, but he was the barrister who wrote it into English law almost 400 years ago.

Among the sports enjoyed by the native Alaskans is a contest wherein two teams of women try to make each other laugh.

BASEBALL

At what age does a professional baseball player tend to be most valuable to his team? So inquires a client. Can't pin down one exact year, regret to report, but the authorities who ought to know claim the typical player has most to offer between the ages 28 and 34.

Q. "Will you kindly tell my wife that it's dangerous to empty a vacuum cleaner bag into a burning incinerator?"

A. By all means. That could be explosive. So can uncooked cereal. Add flour. The only non-explosive form of dust that comes to mind at the moment is talcum powder, although there are a few others, I think.

How many radios do you have access to? Am surprised to learn that studies reveal the average family has five.

FIRST CENSUS

"Did you say the first census was taken 33 years after William Shakespeare's death? Wrong! Everybody knows that Jesus was born in Bethlehem because Mary and Joseph had to go there to take part in the Roman census. See Luke 11:2." Signed: Chris Crandall, apprentice copyreader.

Q. "How frequently does somebody or other commit suicide in this country?"

A. Happens every seven minutes. But somebody or other tries and fails to do that thing every three and a half minutes.

Geri Kery, Mary Kery and Joe Klo, all of the same family at Bethlehem, Pa., certainly deserve membership in the "My Name Is a Poem " Club, too, what?

Q. "How much money does Jean Stapleton make for her role as Edith Bunker in 'All in the Family'?"

A. $30,000 per show, she's said.

Tuna in water great for diet

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am on a low-cholesterol diet. Is canned tuna fish packed in water good for my diet? Also, how about scallops? I read that scallops are low in cholesterol. Is that so? Please give me some information on what I should eat to keep my cholesterol down.

DEAR READER — The water-packed tuna is an excellent choice for a low-fat, low-cholesterol food. Only 5.7 per cent of its calories are from fat. Not many other foods are that low in fat, particularly if they give you any protein at all. And a three - and - a - half ounce portion contains only 52 milligrams of cholesterol. Lean beef and most fish contain about 70 milligrams, which is not high compared to the high cholesterol foods such as egg yolks (one yolk contains 225 milligrams) or fat in dairy products.

Scallops are an equally good choice and only a little more than two per cent of the calories in scallops are from fat. A three-and-a-half ounce edible portion, raw, contains only 60 milligrams of cholesterol.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 1-3, Diet, Preventing Atherosclerosis to give you a general concept of what foods you should eat and which ones you should avoid in following a low-fat, low-cholesterol diet. Other who want this information can send 50 cents for it with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — If a person is highly allergic to penicillin does that mean he will also be allergic to bee stings?

My mother-in-law thinks she read in your column that anyone who has a reaction to penicillin will have that same reaction if stung by a bee. Since she almost died from penicillin she is petrified of bees.

As soon as the doctor gave her the penicillin shot she had a buzzing of bees in her ears, the room was spinning and she swelled up all inside which caused her to be unable to breathe. The doctor had to give her two shots to bring her out of the reaction.

My mother-in-law is very upset and I can't convince her that this does not mean she is automatically allergic to bees. She never had a reaction to penicillin before.

DEAR READER — She didn't read that in my column. There is no connection to being allergic to penicillin and having severe reactions to bee stings.

Before a person has an allergic reaction to anything they must first be sensitized to the offending agent. In your mother-in-law's case she had received penicillin before and became sensitized to it at that time. The next time she was challenged with the penicillin shot she had a penicillin reaction.

She does have the basis for forming allergies so she should be tested carefully before taking medicines to see if she is sensitive to them. If she happens to use hair tints she should be sure to always test her reaction. Other than a general increased tendency to have allergic reactions she need not worry about anything except penicillin and she needs to avoid it like the plague.

One visualizes the final round of the Spingold or the Vanderbilt as replete with brilliant bidding and scintilating play, but that is not always the case. Sometimes the experts slip.

Three notrump is a cinch, but it is hard to get to and both pairs arrived at five clubs. A heart was discarded on the ace of diamonds at both tables.

Larry Cohen of the Rosenkranz team discarded a heart on the ace of diamonds, played the ace of spades, ruffed a spade and led a heart to East's 10. A club was returned to dummy's eight, another spade ruffed and a second heart led to East's ace.

East led another trump, but it was to no avail. Larry won in dummy ruffed another spade, ruffed a heart with dummy's three of trumps, discarded his last heart on dummy's fifth spade and claimed.

The other declarer overlooked the possibility in that fifth spade. He led a heart at trick two to East's 10, his queen and West's king. West led a trump. A second heart went to East's ace and a second trump made it impossible for declarer to ruff more than one heart. Down one!

ROLLING STONE

Record Reviews

By DAVE MARSH

QUEEN: "A day at the Races" (Elektra 6E-101).

Kings of progressive hard rock, Queen draw their inspiration, such as it may be, from Yes and Led Zeppelin and the Beatles. Lead vocalist Freddie Mercury is occasionally a ringer for Zep's Robert Plant, while guitarist Brian May is a sort of reductionist version of every progressive guitarist from Jimmy Page and Jeff Beck through Jimi Hendrix and his descendants. There is nothing original here, but songs like "Tie Your Mother Down" are pleasant enough.

* * *

GENESIS: "Wind & Wuthering" (Atco SD 36-44).

A superior version of progressive rock, Genesis do have some originality, principally in their fusion of English folk and jazz-rock textures. Guitarists Steve Hackett and Michael Rutherford, the band's most biting members, take something of a backseat here to Tony Banks' whining synthesizer, which costs them some punch compared to the stage show. But Phil Collins has improved greatly as a vocalist, and when he gets a good pop song to sing (Rutherford, "Your Own Special Way"), Genesis become the most accessible progressive mood-music band since the Yes of "Roundabout."

* * *

THIN LIZZY: "Johnny the Fox" (Mercury SRM-1-1119).

Thin Lizzy are among the finest of the derivative hard-rock bands, principally because their extension of the Yardbirds-Rolling Stones tradition includes a good, tough singer and writer, bassist Phil Lynott. This album drops the lilting Springsteen-like accents of their hit, "Boys Are Back in Town," in favor of a more driving, guitar-based sound. The results are a bit less satisfying, principally because some stylistic breadth is sacrificed. But a pair of tracks at the end of Side One, "Don't Believe a Word," and "Fool's Gold," are as powerful and catchy as the best of anyone's hard rock.

TONY BIRD (Columbia PC 34324).

Despite a cover which makes it seem that this debut album has been released posthumously, Bird is one of the finest new "Dylans" to emerge recently. Surely, he is the only to arrive via Malawi, South Africa. Much of Bird's best writing — he is a rather scratchy-voiced singer — is devoted to evoking his homeland, often with excellent results. The arrangements are sketchy, generally only acoustic guitar and harmonica, which does not detract from the intensity of such material as "Song of the Long Grass," the anti-apartheid statement "Athlone Incident," and the pastoral picture of his native valley, "Rift Valley." The love songs are not so good — they tend to be just the kind of sentimentalism that makes one glad the folk movement has collapsed.

* * *

PENNY MARSHALL/CINDY WILLIAMS: "Laverne & Shirley Sing" (Atlantic SD 18203).

This album one fervently hopes is a joke — a collection of oldies including "Da Do Ron Ron," "Graduation Day" and "I'm Walkin'," all performed with equal insensitivity. What makes it interesting — except as further proof that Laverne & Shirley and Da Fonz have about as much to do with '50s pop styles as the Reader's Digest — is the absurdity with which Marshall intones, on "Sixteen Reasons": "Foahteen, Sing it Shurl." If this is the way people in Milwaukee talk, Milwaukee is a suburb of Brooklyn.

'Network' boosts Holden's career

OSCAR WINNERS?

William Holden, right, and the late Peter Finch, who died of a heart attack recently, are shown in a scene from "Network," a black comedy about television insanity. Both men have been mentioned as possible candidates for Academy Awards for their work in the film.

Possible for Oscar in movie

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Not many film stars enjoy a burst of career activity after nearly 40 years in movies, and William Holden is enjoying it.

The cause is "Network," Paddy Chayefsky's black comedy of television insanity. Holden plays Max Schumacher, a burnt-out news executive who leaves his wife for an on-the-rise programming chief, Faye Dunaway. Along with his costar, the late Peter Finch, Holden is being mentioned for an Academy Awards nomination.

He has been there before. He won the Oscar for his cynical P.O.W. in "Stalag 17," in 1953. His interests range from hunting for art work in upper New Guinea with Stefanie Powers to relocating endangered wild beasts for the Kenya government. So you'd think he wouldn't be excited about the resurgence of his career. Wrong.

"It's fun," he admitted. "Films worth doing are few and far between. Any time you're in a successful film you start to get scripts in numbers. Most of it is sheer crap. But out of it might come something of real value, like 'Network.'"

Holden shares Chayefsky's baleful view of television — "Paddy told it straight; he is not a sentimentalist." The actor has made two ventures into TV — the four-hour "Blue Knight" that preceded the George Kennedy series; and "21 Hours at Munich," the feature about the massacre of Israeli athletes at the 1972 Olympic Games. "It was not too well done," he said. "The film plays much better in the theater version in Europe; it has more tempo."

Now that he is spending more time in this country, Holden tries to catch all the new series at least once. Then he finds himself watching only public television, the news or sports — or reading.

"There is too much to read to spend time before the TV set; I'm not a channel jumper," he remarked.

At 58, Bill Holden seems remarkably fit, and he admitted being on a regimen that permits nothing stronger than mineral water. That has been true for almost two years, before which he had a reputation as one of the film world's better boozers.

"I got started in the picture business with a hard-drinking crowd — guys like Brod Crawford and John Wayne," he said. "Booze was a way of life — the macho thing to do. Then in my world travels I became acquainted with a lot of would-be Hemingways. Can you imagine the booze consumed in the bars of Nairobi? There's no way I could keep up with those guys.

"Besides, it's expensive. Not the drinks for myself — the ones you have to buy for others. One year when I was abroad, I kept my dressing room-office at Paramount open. Everybody dropped in for a drink on 'good ole Bill.' I was gone the whole year and my bar bill was $3,500."

Bouts with hepatitis, malaria, dengue fever and other tropical ailments convinced Holden he could do without liquor. Also the fact that he could buy a compact car with what he saved. He doesn't miss it.

Boyle playing Sen. Joe McCarthy: 'interested in a human being'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Peter Boyle, a New York actor, a physically big man with a wild but gentle sense of humor, paused in front of the Hollywood Brown Derby, the "dining room of the stars since 1929."

"Look at that thing go," he said softly, admiringly, inspecting a revolving tray of pastry. "Fatty Arbuckle strikes again ..."

Then he eased inside to chat about "Tail Gunner Joe," an NBC film, airing on Feb. 6. He's its star, cast as the late, Red-hunting Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy, R-Wis., and it is safe to say that he and the senator have very little in common.

For starters, Boyle used to pal around with Abbie Hoffman. And Boyle's father was a Roosevelt Democrat. And he calls himself a "progressive Democrat."

Now, with this background, one might think he felt a bit whacky playing a man who added another ism — McCarthyism — to the lexicon with his charges of communist infiltration in the government in the 1950s.

"Naw, I didn't feel whacky doing it," Boyle said in his high, lilting voice. "The issues, all that, are outside of it. You just get interested in a human being, in what he's feeling about what he's doing.

"The ideology of it can go either way. I mean, he could've been right-wing, left-wing" — his Irish face lit up as he mentally bounced around the possibilities — "or chicken wing."

Boyle does that often, tosses in whimsical thoughts or voices, almost like a softer Jonathan Winters, no doubt echoing his early days in Chicago's "Second City" improvisational troupe.

Now 40, the Philadelphia-born actor and ex-member of the Christian Brothers spent 14 years in acting obscurity before hitting it big in 1970 as a loud, bullying, blue-collar bigot in a film called "Joe."

It led to other featured roles in films as diverse as "Young Frankenstein" and "The Friends of Eddie Coyle," with funny, offbeat trips into the truly absurd in "Slither" and his favorite, "Steelyard Blues."

He pondered a moment when asked what, after all his research on the character of Sen. Joseph McCarthy, he thought that bombastic, much-feared Capitol Hill customer was like.

He was like a split personality, Boyle said, a demon when grilling witnesses in front of TV cameras, and "a really charming and kind of enjoyable guy" in private.

"I think all of us are split (in personality) in some way, but it seemed to me he was very flamboyant, energetic, theatrical and obviously very turned on by the audience," he said.

"He's almost on a stage, playing it out" — Boyle's voice went low, into the McCarthy character — "'Do you mean to tell me in front of millions of people,' all this stuff.

"I mean, I'm an actor and I've been around actors all my life and it's very familiar behavior." He smiled, as the humor of what he was saying struck him. "Yeah, just another crazy actor. Great."

GARTH "WOODY" ELLWOOD

With a name like "Pickens & Reid," I really don't see how a country group can miss! Add their appendage, "The Boys With The Noise," and you have the country and bluegrass group which promises to bring a footstompin' hoedown to The Younger Bros. for that club's first anniversary celebration next Monday night.

As a duo, Rick Pickens and Jim Reid began playing clubs and gin joints in Orange County and panhandling for kicks and tips at such places as Catalina Island and The Laguna Sawdust Festival. Since the duo picked up some noise, i.e. harmonica, bass and drums, they've gotten a happy act together and have gone into club work seriously.

And Monday night they will be at Younger Bros., Central and Francis in Chino, where you'll find 50-cent drinks all day (and night) in observance of the club's anniversary.

Atlantic Fish & Chips owner Kuen Kwang's wife has joined him from Taiwan. Kuen (American name Bill) bought the fish & chip place at 1057 W. Foothill from Ernie and Berenice Goh the first of the month, and the newly reunited couple seem to be adapting to our ways pretty well.

Bill is well credentialed when it comes to cooking (school and restaurant experience in his native Taiwan, chef of a large Chinese sit-down restaurant in Ohio before coming to California,) but he's having some problems mastering the English language. I've noticed some improvement in the four short weeks I've been talking to him and I'm sure it won't be long until he's speaking the language as well as he's preparing fish and shrimp for his customrs.

Mrs. Kwang says we can call her Karen, which will prevent a language problem for us in dealing with her given name, Chia-Hsun!

Last Saturday night was my introduction, albeit rather late in life, to the French delicacy, escargot. Now I know people who think it positively sophisticated to eat snails, but it has taken me several years of mental adjustments to attempt entry to their ranks. The site was Walt Rippe's Arbor Restaurant, chosen for it's consistently excellent food. While I can't say I'm a devotee of escargot as yet, I can say the dining experience at the Arbor was as satisfying as I had anticipated. The regular dinner cut Prime Rib was ample for me, the service was attentive and friendly, the atmosphere comfortable. And, if I were in the habit of rating restaurants, I'd have to give the Arbor high marks for it's consistently dependable quality.

About Our Pies . . .
O'Reilly's original pie baker, Ruby Parisien, has been baking pies professionally for 22 years. Ruby started baking pies for restaurants in her home many years ago, and finally set up shop at O'Reilly's soon after it was opened in 1962. Ruby still holds to her home-baking methods and uses only the finest ingredients. She insists on fresh peeled apples, fresh grated coconuts, only the finest imported Dutch chocolate and many other quality oriented techniques to insure a fresh, deliciously home baked pie. Every pie is a new and proud creation for Ruby, and we are very proud to have such a lovely, dedicated person on our staff.

HE'S COME A LONG WAY

Known in his playing days as "Zeke from Cabin Creek," Lakers coach Jerry West has come a long way from his West Virginia beginning. His future is apparently as bright as his past.

Lions go after Knox

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — It appears Los Angeles Rams' Coach Chuck Knox is headed for the Detroit Lions, but officials from both teams deny published reports that Knox will do so in exchange for a trade of players.

A source on the Detroit Lions said Thursday the National Football League team has been seeking Knox. The same source said, however, that the hangup is what compensation, if any, the Rams are entitled to in exchange for the coach.

"They're (the Lions) trying to steal my coach," said Rams' owner Carroll Rosenbloom, who indicated he would expect to be compensated if Knox left for Detroit.

But Rosenbloom insisted at the same time that "Chuck Knox is the head coach of the Rams and will continue in that capacity."

Knox added he is "in total agreement with Carroll's statement and that's all that needs to be said in the matter."

There has been ill feelings between the Lions and Rams ever since Detroit wide receiver Ron Jessie signed with Los Angeles in 1975, afer playing out his option here. Commissioner Pete Rozelle awarded Cullen Bryant to the Lions as compensation. The Rams' running back balked, headed for court, and the Lions received a No. 1 draft choice.

A Lions' spokesman, meanwhile, characterized as "ridiculous" a report that Knox would come to Detroit in exchange for a trade of players. The report was published in the Oakland (Mich.) Press.

Such a deal would be the first coach-for-players swap in professional football history. The Pontiac newspaper said the only matter unresolved was the Lions' compensation.

The paper also reported that disgruntled LA quarterback Ron Jaworski would go to Detroit as part of the deal, possibly in exchange for two or three Lions. Jaworski, however, is a free agent and cannot be traded.

Los Angeles is in the market for a tight end and a defensive tackle as compensation for Knox, the paper said, and a quarterback or top draft choice for Jaworski, who has played out his option.

Knox's duties in Detroit would be coach and general manager, the Press said. Detroit general manager Russ Thoas would be elevated to a post as assistant to owner William Clay Ford, the paper reported.

Knox, 44, was an assistant coach with the Lions from 1967 to 1972. He has coached the Rams to National Conference Western Division titles the past four years. His teams have compiled a 44-11-1 record.

Detroit's coach, Tommy Hudspeth, was named interim replacement for Rick Forzano early last season. Forzano resigned. Hudspeth was director of player personnel and said he was not hopeful of being officially named coach next season.

Remy signs new contract

ANAHEIM (AP) — California Angel second baseman Jerry Remy signed a multi-year contract with the American League club, one of nine players to come to terms with the club.

The Angels said Thursday that Remy, 24, was the only one of the nine to sign a contract for more than one year.

The others coming to terms were starting pitcher Gary Ross, third baseman Ron Jackson, centerfielder Rusty Torres, outfielders Bob Jones and Frankie George, infielder Orlando Ramirez and Rance Mulliniks and pitcher Pat Cristelli.

Remy hit .263 last year and stole 35 bases in his second major league season.

Garlits records 241.93

By PAUL CLICK
PB Correspondent

Don Garlits took over first place in the Top Fuel division Thursday from James Warren with a last minute run of 5.94 seconds at 241.93 miles per hour in the opening day qualifying round of the 17th annual Winternationals.

The first day of qualifying at the Los Angeles County Fairgrounds was marred by an accident as Funny Car driver Billy Meyer was injured in an accident enroute to the track. Meyer's car collided with its own tow truck and another vehicle.

Meyer, who is from Waco, Tex., was listed in fair condition Thursday night. He suffered head injuries in the crack-up.

James Warren had early taken the number one qualifying spot in the Top Fuel category with a time of 6.03 but Garlits turned in a faster time on the next to last qualifying run as darkness overtook the Fairgrounds. Top Fuel favorite Shirley Muldowney placed third with a time of 6.11 seconds and a speed of 230.76.

Garlits of Seffiner, Fla., is competing in his first National Hot Rod Association competition in over a year.

Only nine cars participated in the Funny Car bracket as Gary Burgin of Stanton turned in the top time of the day at 6.31.

Funny car favorite Don Prudhomme placed sixth with a time of 7.47 in the first day's activities. The Funny Car event has attracted 30 rivals for "The Snake". Ed McCulloch a top threat to Prudhomme's third consecutive Pomona title was third at 6.71. Raymond Beadle and Shirl Greer, who are also logical candidates to take Prudhomme's crown, have yet to take a run down the track.

Beadle from Dallas, Tex., is hoping to capture the Funny Car title with his famed "Blue Max" which is a 1976 Mustang II.

"I think we've got a real good chance of winning the Funny Car," explained Beadle about overhauling Prudhomme. "We ran really well last weekend at Orange County. In fact we set the track record and we ran under it twice in a row with an .01 in the finals."

Beadle's "Blue Max" Mustang recently turned in the third fastest time in Funny Car history at 6.01 seconds.

"The car is in excellent shape," added Beadle. "We didn't bring our brand new car here with us as this is the car that we ran at Indy and the Supernationals. We didn't see no need to have any new problems to start off with so we brought what we knew would work.

"It looks like we have a lot of new competitors this year that is normally not here. But of course our biggest competitor is Prudhomme. It's Prudhomme we have to point for but there's also the other people, McCulloch and Tom Hoover."

Pomona's Jerry Darien placed third in the opening round of qualifying in Pro Comp. Darien turned in a time of 6.94 with a speed of 196.07.

La Verne's Chuck Smithfield turned in a speed of 9.08 in his '76 Vega for the ninth spot in Pro Stock competition. Smithfield had a speed of 149.50. Gary Sutherland of Glendora placed second in Pro Comp behind Torrance's Bill Williams with a time of 6.95.

Qualifying in the eight categories continues through Saturday with finals on Sunday. The final qualifying round runs all day with the activities beginning at 7 a.m. and concluding at 5 p.m.

Approach pays off for West

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Mr. Clutch is now Mr. Coach" says the billboard featuring a smiling Jerry West, and Los Angeles Laker fans are beginning to believe it.

The former NBA All-Star guard pictured on the Lakers' promotional sign is trying to perform a minor miracle in his first season of coaching, transforming the Lakers from also-rans into overnight successes.

Los Angeles, which had fallen on hard times since West and Wilt Chamberlain helped bring home the NBA championship in 1972, has suddenly began to look like a contender.

After a slow start, the Lakers are near the top of the Pacific Division and have been the hottest team in the league in recent weeks. They have the third best record in the NBA, and go for a club record 18th straight home victory tonight when they host Philadelphia.

West, still boyish-looking at 38, said when he took the Lakers' coaching job last year that he hoped to make basketball fun for his players. Now he says he believes that approach is paying off.

"I remember the things I didn't like as a player, like gruelling two-hour practices in midseason," said West, who earned the nickname "Mr. Clutch" with his frequent game-winning shots during his 14 years with the Lakers.

"Our practices are short, and I think we accomplish a lot. I don't believe you can practice a team and make it better 50 games into the season."

West admits his Lakers are still pretty much a one-man show with superstar center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar providing most of the punch, although others, most notably Cazzie Russell, have being playing well.

"But," he says, "We've been able to rest Kareem a lot more this season than in the past, and almost everyone on the team is getting a lot of playing time.

"I think all our guys have a helpful attitude toward each other, and that's a big plus. I actually think most of the players are having fun now. Of course it's easier to have fun when you're winning."

Despite his team's rise, West seems hardly overconfident about the rest of the season.

"I've seen too many strange things happen," he remarked. "This year is really strange; teams that are perfect at home can't win on the road, and anybody can really beat anybody else on a given night."

The Laker coach said he thought the addition of four former American Basketball Association teams to the NBA made things less predictable.

"There are players playing in the NBA today who couldn't have made the squad four or five years ago.

"I hate to compare the past and present, but there's just no comparison between this Laker team and

Poly offers unique twinbill

By BILL LANGLEY
PB Sports Editor

Cal Poly Pomona will be trying an interesting basketball experiment tonight at Kellogg Gym with an unique doubleheader slated against archrival Cal Poly San Luis Obispo.

In an effort to attract more fans and create more interest on campus, Poly will get the sexes together with the women and men playing on the same card against the visitors from SLO.

Coach Darlene May will present her powerful women's team in the 6 p.m. opener while Coach Don Hogan's males will battle the Mustangs in the nightcap in what shapes up as a key California Collegiate Athletic Association battle.

Hogan just wishes his team could enter the twinbill with as much momentum as the ladies.

"If we don't reverse our record soon, we may end up in the preliminary game," Hogan quipped earlier this week.

The way things have been going, the females are threatening to take over the basketball interest at Poly.

May's Broncettes are sailing along with a 12-2 record marred only by losses to major college foes UCLA and Cal State Fullerton, two of the top teams in the nation.

On its own level, the Poly women are just too strong. For instance, the Broncettes are averaging 82.3 points a game while allowing only 53.7.

May considers the two preliminary games — there is a second one scheduled for a week from Saturday — as highlights of the season.

However, the top attractions are still ahead. her team will entertain UCLA on Saturday, Feb. 12, and will host the national small college championships on March 22-26.

"I think it's good to play a doubleheader like this," May said. "It works out well for both teams. I know we're looking forward it. If the fans respond, maybe we will do it even more next year."

Hogan also is looking forward to it.

"It should be an interesting experiment," he said. "I hope we get a good turnout."

The Broncos (7-10 for the year and 1-1 in CCAA play) face an important weekend. Following tonight's battle against SLO, defending champion Cal State Bakersfield comes in for an 8 p.m. game Saturday night.

SLO rates as the early favorite in the CCAA. Coach Ernie Wheeler's Mustangs are 2-0 in conference play after sweeping Cal State Los Angeles and UC Riverside last weekend.

The Mustangs also have the best overall record (9-7) of any CCAA member. SLO's best victory was an 18-point shocker over Stanford early in the season.

Guard Lewis Cohen (6-3) is the big difference for SLO this season. The transfer from Pierce College scored 12 points, passed out nine assists and pulled down 15 rebounds in the 70-52 win over Riverside.

Gerald Jones (6-4) and Andre Keys (6-7) are SLO's top scorers for the season with 16.9 and 16.6 averages.

Bakersfield enters tonight's game at Northridge with a surprising 0-2 record in CCAA play after losing to Cal State L.A. and Riverside last weekend.

The Roadrunners have the CCAA's top three scorers in Mylow Rucker (19.1), Warren Jackson (17.6) and Greg Johnwell (17.6).

Poly has had a week's rest from last weekend's losses to Northridge and Southern California College as Hogan is hoping a short rest will prove a tonic.

Chino eyes playoffs

By MIKE BROSSART
PB Staff Writer

Tonight's visit by Garey High may be the most important basketball game of the year for the Chino Cowboys.

"It's a very pivotal game for us," said Chino coach Bob Elder, who is eyeing a playoff berth for his team.

"The CIF will probably take three teams from the San Antonio League," continued Elder. "You have to concede that Damien and Ganesha are going to make it (to the playoffs); I don't see any way around that.

"So we're going to have to beat Garey if we want to go."

The Cowboys are in a three-way tie for fourth place with a 3-4 record and the Vikings are third at 5-2. But Elder has a reason for optimism: his Cowboys will have five home games among their seven second-round contests.

"We think that will be to our advantage," said Elder. "The only thing is, we haven't really played that well at home so far."

The Cowboys have played well enough at home, however, to win both their games — over Montclair and Claremont.

On the road, Chino beat Pomona in the first round but lost to the three leaders — Damien, Ganesha and Garey — as well as Upland.

Tonight Chino will play host to a Garey team that it very nearly upset in the Vikings' gym. In the league opener for both teams, Garey needed two overtime periods to dispose of the Cowboys, 86-84. Chino led that game by seven points in regulation play with as little as 43 seconds to play.

"I'm looking forward to this game," said Elder. "I think we'll play pretty well. If we don't beat Garey, we're finished as far as the playoffs go."

Chino has had one major problem thus far: "We haven't outrebounded anybody yet," Elder lamented. "Even when we play well and win, we get outrebounded." The Cowboys' tallest player is junior center Gene Campbell, who is 6-foot-2½.

To win tonight, the Cowboys' will have to do something about James Lofton, Garey's 6-6½ center, who can outrebound and outscore any player in the league when he's playing well, according to Garey coach Mike Wells.

In his last two games, against Damien and Montclair, Lofton has scored 53 points and grabbed 36 rebounds.

"We've changed our offense so that James has to move more," said Wells.

"He wasn't using enough movement earlier, so now we bring the ball down away from James (that is, on the opposite side of the key). So if he wants to get the ball, he's got to move to do it."

Lofton's recent point totals indicate that the strategy has worked quite well.

Tonight's other SAL games will find Montclair at Damien, Pomona at Ganesha and Claremont at Upland, all at 8 p.m.

Lutheran La Verne will meet Lutheran Orange at Damien High Saturday at 6 p.m.

USC's chances: slim and none

By The Associated Press

Southern California collegiate basketball has had some of its greatest moments in UCLA's Pauley Pavilion, but chances of history repeating itself look slim when the Trojans go there to face the 10th-ranked Bruins tonight.

UCLA brings a 14-2 overall mark and 3-1 Pacific-8 record into the game, against the Trojans' 4-12 and 0-4. Plus, USC has not won a Pac-8 game in 19 outings stretching over two seasons.

USC owns two rare victories over UCLA at Pauley, in 1969 and 1970, but has lost its last 17 outings to the powerful Bruins.

Boyd nevertheless is optimistic. USC's leading scorer, Greg White, is back in action after an injury, and the Trojans posted an impressive 101-65 triumph over Denver in their latest outing.

"The return of White puts our best player back on the floor and strengthens us considerably," Boyd said. "And our victory over Denver gives us a postitive approach again. We can be optimistic about the future.

"Make no mistake, the Denver game was a critical one for us."

He said patience is the key for his Trojans against the Bruins, who are Pac-8 lead.

"We can't just go over there and run wildly up and down the court with that team," Boyd said.

Other West Coast games tonight include Oregon State at Seattle in a non-conference clash, and Pepperdine at Loyola and St. Mary's at Nevada-Reno in West Coast Athletic Conference action.

In non-conference games Thursday night, Cal downed Cal-Davis 64-52, and Stanford lost a 69-62 decision to Air Force.

Ray Murry scored 21 points to spark Cal's victory, and Mike Bratz had 25 points for Stanford in the Cardinals' loss.

In Pacific Coast Athletic Association play Thursday, Long Beach State moved into the uncontested conference lead with a 74-67 triumph over Fullerton State. That 49er victory, combined with San Diego State's 77-61 loss to Fresno State, gave Long Beach the PCAA lead with a 4-0 mark.

Mike Gregory scored 21 points to help Fresno State break a nine-game loss string and hand San Diego State its first league setback.

In another PCAA contest, Tex Walker and Wayne Stevenson chipped in 18 points apiece to spark UC Santa Barbara to an 81-77 victory

Al Sandoval still perfect

LOS ANGELES — Pomona boxer Alberto Sandoval maintained his perfect record Thursday night with a unanimous decision over Frankie Granados at Olympic Auditorium.

Sandoval knocked the back peddling Granados down twice, in the third and tenth rounds. It was his 16th straight victory, with 10 coming by knockout.

The hard punching youngster weighed 116 pounds, but had to put on weight for the match to get near the bantamweight maximum of 118.

Sandoval and his manager, Jackie McCoy, seem to feel that Sandoval's future is as a flyweight.

"I'm sure I could make 112 pounds without any difficulty, Sandoval said. "Just a couple of days ago, I weighed 114."

"I guess it's about time to get him in with a challenger or two," said McCoy. "He's probably two or three

Play Better Golf—with JACK NICKLAUS

Leaders eye Tom Watson

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Bob Zender and Tom Kite performed some last-hole heroics for the lead in $180,000 Andy Williams-San Diego Open, but they had to be keeping an anxious eye on threatening Tom Watson.

"You'll see the good players, the Millers and the Greens and the Nicklauses and, hopefully, the Watsons, they get on a streak and they ride the momentum until the wave runs out," said Watson, a winner last week and looking for another triumph.

And Watson definitely has the momentum still going.

He scored only the second hole-in-one of his pro career— an eight-iron shot that hit to the left of the hole, ran about three feet past, then sucked back into the hole—on his way to a six-under-par 66 Thursday that left him one shot back of Kite and Zender, each of whom birdied the final hole for 65s.

"The more you play, the more you learn about this game, the better you play, the longer your streaks are," Watson said, flashing a boyish smile. "When I first came on the tour, my streaks lasted about two holes."

Watson, a former British Open champion who has finished fourth and first in his last two starts, was tied with Homero Blancas and Lon Hinkle. At 67, five-under-par, were veteran Don January, Leonard Thompson, Bill Rogers, Barry Jaeckel, Rick Acton, Australian Bob Shearer, Dennie Meyer and rookie Jay Haas.

Ben Crenshaw headed a group of more than a dozen at 69. Defending champion J.C. Snead had a 71, while Arnold Palmer, playing with a painful sprain in his right hand, was far back at 74.

In all, 81 of the starting field of 156 bettered par 72. Most of the low scores came on the shorter, easier North course, which Kite, Zender, Blancas and Watson all played. All players switched courses today and the final two rounds will be played on the 7,047-yard South course.

"You give these players a course in perfect shape with good greens and you'll get low scoring," Zender said. Kite, who scored his first tour victory in Philadelphia last year, agreed. "I've never seen it play easier at this tournament," he said.

Course offered

A leadership training course for adults interested in youth athletics is being offered at Claremont High School through Claremont Adult Education.

The course is designed to better prepare adults to organize, coach and officiate youth athletics — specifically baseball.

Teachers for the course will be Jack Helber, first-year varsity coach at Claremont High, and Gordon Taylor, former Pomona High coach.

The class will meet Mondays from 7 to 9 p.m. in Room 603 at Claremont High. The course begins next Monday, Jan. 31.

Speakers for the course will include baseball coaches Ben Hines of La Verne College, Bill Arce of Claremont-Mudd and Skip Claprood of Citrus as well as former St. Louis Cardinals' shortstop Dal Maxville.

Further information may be obtained by calling Helber at Claremont High or at 621-3753, Taylor at Pomona High or Claremont Adult Education.

Upland grapplers look impressive

Upland High increased its lead in the San Antonio League wrestling standings Thursday with a convincing 42-20 win over visiting Chino.

The victory gives the Highlanders a perfect 3-0 mat mark in SAL action. Chino is now 1-1-1.

In another SAL match Thursday, Montclair bested Garey, 39-20. Montclair is now 2-0-1, while Garey is 1-2-0.

Upland received pins from Dan Fleck, Ken Ogden, Glenn Cozart, Manuel Guerrero, Kelly Reifel and a forfeit win by Rich Dalquest to silence Chino. Lone Cowboy pin was recorded by Larry Gleason in a 193-pound match.

Pins by Don Markley and Kent Gurney helped Montclair overcome Garey. Only Viking pin was recorded by Danny Perez in the 97-pound match.

Garey and Chino will be active this week in the Quartz Hill Tourney.

Poly swimmers fall to Fresno

Fresno State nipped the Cal Poly swim team 60-53 Thursday afternoon at the Broncos' pool.

Brian Dineen (200 and 500-yard freestyle) and Steve Evans (one and three-meter diving) were double winners for Poly. The Bronco poolsters are now 2-5 on the year.

Poly will be hosting the Bronco Relays today and Saturday. Action starts both days at 10 a.m.

The Montreal Expos won fewer games than any of the 24 major league teams in 1976.

Vikings triumph

Garey High's soccer team scored an impressive 5-2 win over host Pomona Thursday afternoon.

The win improves the Vikings' San Antonio League soccer mark to 4-1-2. Garey is now tied with Chino for second place in the SAL standings behind Damien.

Pomona saw its SAL mark slip to 0-6-1. Rick O'Shay scored the two Devil goals, both in the second half.

In a Montview League game played Thursday, Webb upped its league record to 4-2 and its season mark to 6-4-1 with a 3-2 win over visiting Workman. John Widyatmadja, John Richards and Marcus Forcinelli scored for the Guals. Richards' goal was his 17th of the season.

One night game is on tap tonight in the SAL. In that match, Chino will entertain Garey at 5 p.m.

AUCKLAND, New Zealand — Tim Wilkinson, a 17 year-old student from Shelby, N.C., defeated Richard Unkovich of Auckland 6-4, 7-5 in the second round of the Auckland Tennis Championship.

LYNDONVILLE, Vt. — A Canadian team, including twins Shirley and Sharon Firth, won the women's 15-kilometer relay race in the U.S. National Cross-Country Ski Championships.

MSAC wrestlers in SCC showdown

After beating South Coast Conference wrestling opponents Santa Ana and Grossmont, Mt. San Antonio College will host Cerritos tonight at 7:30 p.m. in what may be the deciding match for the conference championship.

Both clubs currently hold 2-0 SCC records. Both have already beaten defending conference champ Grossmont.

Gerald Singh leads the Mounties with eight pins in the 134-pound weight class while 190-pounder Bob Allen has seven falls. Singh owns a 19-7 record on the season and Allen holds the best win-loss percentage on the squad with a 20-3 mark.

Four MSAC grapplers enter the Cerritos match unbeaten in conference. Joe Barragan has won both his SCC matches en route to a 23-6 season mark in the 167-pound division.

JUNGLE WALL MURAL

Do-it-yourself

Instant jungle wall mural

Take one hard-to-decorate wall, one steam or dry iron, our new Jungle Wall Mural pattern and presto, an instant scene guaranteed to delight young and old alike. The design pictured here was transferred using the iron-on method to an 8' high by 10' wide wall (with room to spare on both ends). But if you have a wider wall to cover, you can expand the mural to your needs. The figures are printed separately to make this a truly flexible mural.

After you have Leo the Lion, Gerry the Giraffe and Irving the Impala on your wall, simply paint by numbers using interior latex paint available everywhere. Our full-size, iron-on pattern includes all the animals pictured here, plus complete instructions on preparing the wall for painting. We've even included an explanation of how to trace the mural onto a wall using carbon paper.

To obtain our new iron-on pattern, JUNGLE WALL MURAL No. 588, send $3.75 (includes postage & handling) by check or money order. For our new 100-page book PATTERNS FOR BETTER LIVING picturing more than 500 simple woodworking and handicraft projects, send $1.50 (includes postage & handling). Address all orders to Steve Ellingson, c/o:

Pomona Progress Bulletin Pattern Dept., P.O. Box 2383, Van Nuys, California 91409.

Home 'nursery' class offered

The Chino Community Adult School is offering a course, Home Nursery and Indoor Floral Techniques, starting on Tuesday, February 8 from 7 to 10 p.m. at the Chino Adult Campus in Room 16. Students may enroll at the first class meeting or at the Adult School Office. Paul Greever is the instructor.

Container gardening for homes/apartments will involve each class member in planting up of their own container with a plant suitable for the container. You will be instructed in the basics of container gardening: how to choose a container, to make a soil mix, to select the plants, to water and to maintain a trouble-free plant in your house or apartment.

Slides and samples of plants, samples of what can be done with plants in a container, guest speakers of industry personnel, and field trips to areas that are landscaped with container plants will be included in the course.

For additional information, call the Adult School Office at 628-1202, ext. 345 between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. daily or 7 to 10 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

Winter display plants

How about adding some bright splashes of color to the garden now? Certain bedding plants set out now will be providing bouquets for cutting well in advance of the normal flush of spring bloom.

Iceland Poppies are among the surest and brightest of the bedding plants for winter display. Their long stems support crinkled cups of orange, white, yellow, pink, red or cream colors — a dazzling array in any season and all the brighter because of the cool, moist weather which they thrive in. Iceland Poppies already in bloom are available for planting — so there's no wait for their colorful blooms. Plant them in a sunny spot in a loose, well-drained soil. You'll be blooms ahead, too, if you incorporate a little garden fertilizer in the flower bed.

Still another annual which can be counted on for winter bloom is the Fairy Primrose, or Primula malacoides. These are excellent for edgings and find their main use in flower borders. Plant them five or six inches apart at most and preferably double row them to heighten the effect. Their delicate heads of bloom come in rose, pink, lavender, or white. Give them semi-shade and a loose, rich soil enriched with compost or an organic potting mix.

Snapdragons can also go in now. Snaps will develop strong stems and abundant flowers in cool weather. Several heights and flower forms are available to choose from. The dwarf varieties make good mass plantings or edgings; while the taller varieties are especially popular as backdrops to other colorful annuals such as Violas, Calendulas and Cinerarias. Snaps also make lovely springtime bouquets for flower arranging.

Dwarf Calendulas are among the most dependable for late winter color. The gardener who thinks of them as warm weather annuals only will be suprised to find them doing better in the cool of winter and early spring. Enjoy the bright shades of yellow and orange atop neat, 12 inch compact plants from now until the very warm weather of summer arrives.

Garden club meet slated

Pomona Valley Organic Garden Club will hold its regular monthly meeting on Feb. 1, at 7:30 p.m. at Palomares Jr. High School, Arrow Highway and Orange Grove Avenue, Pomona.

A film, "Eat, Drink and Be Wary," will stress the dangers of the high-sugar, high-fat convenience foods. This will be followed by a demonstration of "home made goodies" using natural ingredients.

The Club will also hold its regular auction of donated plants, seeds and seedlings. Admission is free and the public is invited.

Here's the answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — You recently told someone how to insulate a cold water pipe to prevent it from dripping in periods of high humidity. Can the insulation also be used on hot water pipes?

A. — Yes. Be sure the type you purchase is intended for use on hot water pipes. The benefit on such pipes is that it cuts down on heat losses.

Q. — The stairway from our basement to the kitchen has developed squeaks. The underside of the stairway is exposed and I have noted there are wedges between the treads and stringers which seem to be a little loose. Is this causing the squeaks, and if so, do I just hammer the wedges tightly in place?

A. — Loose wedges will cause squeaking. If a wedge is loose enough to be withdrawn without too much effort, do so, coat it with wood glue and rehammer it into place. If the wedge resists easy withdrawal, spread glue on the part of it that is exposed, then hammer it back until it is snug. For extra strength, use both glue and finishing nails.

Gardeners check list

—Shrubs for screens and windbreaks are primarily functional, the California Association of Nurserymen points out. In addition to their main purpose-protection from wind and hiding unsightly views — they also serve well in cutting down noise from highway or factory. Choose varieties that blend with the landscaping of your garden and with surrounding terrain.

—In a state where the major agricultural crop is the grape, it seems surprising that more people don't grow this delectable treat in their own gardens. It thrives in our climate bearing abundant crops in all but the coolest gardens of any coastal area. And even there, it will ripen its fruit if planted against a sunny wall, where the maximum amount of heat can be trapped. Check with your C.A.N. nurseryman for the best varieties for your area.

—When setting out bedding plants for spring color, be sure to provide good drainage. This might mean raising the level of your flower beds or incorporating a ready-to-use soil mix or compost.

You and your income tax

Tables aid computation

EDITOR'S NOTE: Following is the fifth in a series of five articles entitled "You and Your Income Taxes." They were written to help taxpayers prepare their 1976 tax returns.

By EDMUND PINTO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Actually computing your taxes this year should be easier for most taxpayers after finding out how much taxable income you have.

That's because the new tax law has set up special tables listing the tax bill for taxable income amounts ranging from $4 to $19,999. And that should cover between 80 per cent and 90 per cent of all taxpayers, according to the Internal Revenue Service.

Gone, then, for these taxpayers, is the need to compute taxes using a formula that requires multiplication, addition and subtraction skills. For taxpayers with taxable income of $20,000 and above, the formula, known as the tax rate schedule, still must be used.

To use the table, find your taxable income bracket along the left-hand side and then find your filing status along the top. Your tax is the amount that is shown where the income line, reading across, meets the status line, reading down.

The amount shown at that point should be reported in the appropriate box of the 1040 or 1040A.

There are actually several ways to compute your taxes, but most taxpayers will be using the tax tables, the rate schedule or schedule G, also known as the income averaging method.

Don't discount income averaging because it is a little more complicated to use. It could save you a large amount of money.

Averaging may work if your taxable income is up this year compared to the last four years.

To work out schedule G you will need copies of your returns for the previous four years, which you should have been saving anyway, and copies of the form, which can be obtained from your local IRS office.

Since the rules governing the use of Schedule G, and the formula needed to compute the taxes are somewhat complex, you might want to ask the IRS or someone familiar with this method to help you.

Now that you have determined what your taxes are, the next step is to reduce that amount by $35 for each person claimed as an exemption, or 2 per cent of your taxable income up to $180. This ceiling is $90 for married taxpayers filing separately.

You'll have to make the calculation to decide which method gives you the greatest dollar savings. And remember, the $35 credit does not apply to exemptions taken for being older than 65 or for blindness. It is only applicable to the number of individuals claimed.

Here are examples of how it works.

If you have five exemptions at $35 each, that comes to a credit of $175. But if your taxable income is at least $9,000, then 2 per cent of that comes to $180 and that is the credit you should claim.

If you have four exemptions, the 2 per cent figure will work out better if your taxable income is higher than $7,050. But take the $35-per-person credit if taxable income is less than $7,000.

The only sure way to find out which is best is to multiply your exemptions on line 6d of the 1040 and 1040A by $35 and compare that answer to 2 per cent of adjusted gross income.

This is not the only credit you may be able to use to reduce your taxes.

This year, for instance, if you have qualifying child care expenses, you can subtract up to $400 for one child or $800 for two or more children, dollar-for-dollar from your tax bill after you have subtracted the personal exemption credit.

The child care credit generally is for parents who both work, and to claim it you must file Form 2441.

There also is a new credit for persons over 65 that has replaced last year's retirement income credit. You must file a schedule R and for a couple, both over 65 and filing jointly, it could reduce taxes by as much as $563.

There could be smaller savings for other categories of taxpayers. The amount saved for all depends on adjusted gross income and money received under Social Security and the Railroad Retirement Act.

The reverse side of the form is Schedule RP and is a credit for persons under 65 who are receiving income from a public retirement system. It also can lead to significant savings subtracted right from taxes.

Finally, a third credit that is useful to a large number of Americans is the earned income credit. It's an important one for low-income Americans because it gives them a refund on income taxes even if they did not make enough money to file this year.

Basically it pays 10 per cent of earned income up to $4,000. That's $400 and the maximum credit allowed. As income goes up above $4,000, the credit is reduced until it ends at $8,000. The IRS provides a worksheet to help figure the right amount.

In order to claim the credit, however, you must have paid more than half the cost of keeping a home in the United States, in which you lived and which was the home for the entire year of your child who was under 19 years old or a fulltime student, or a disabled dependent child.

Also, you cannot claim this credit if you use the married filing separately status.

As in every facet of income taxes, from credits to deductions, to the arithmetic calculations, remember one important fact. If you are confused anywhere along the line, have questions about any area of taxes, the IRS can and is required to provide you with assistance either over the telephone or in person if you visit your nearest IRS office.

Weapons caches raise questions

Paramilitary 'soldiers' lost in time, keeping low profile

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Although buried weapons caches of unprecedented size have been dug from the Mojave Desert recently, authorities say they would be surprised if the trail led to active paramilitary groups of any magnitude.

A decade ago in Southern California a few small bands of men preached hatred of Jews, blacks and Reds, and gathered weapons for the day when they would have to repel Communist invaders.

At their collective peak, they probably comprised no more than a few hundred active "soldiers."

Today, they are largely gone — dead or scattered to the four winds, or keeping the lowest of profiles.

Yet huge buried arsenals — tons of rifles and bombs and machine guns — recently have come to light when desert sands shifted in the wind. Among the munitions were training manuals and aged hate literature, anti-black, anti-Jew, anti-Communist.

Are they the abandoned armories of one of the paramilitary groups such as the Minutemen, the California Rangers, the Christian Defense League that apparently dissolved long ago? Or is Donald Grove Wiggins, an Ontario, Calif., foundry operator on whose land in Los Angeles and San Bernardino counties the caches were found, a link to a still-active private army?

If the latter is true, "Probably in reality we are not talking about great numbers of people" said Pat Casey, assistant director of the organized crime unit of the state attorney general's office. He said his office has seen little evidence of ultraconservative groups holding maneuvers or mounting any public activity in recent years.

Howard Jarvis, a longtime conservative politician who knew many of the leaders of ultra-right groups in the 1960s, recalls, "They were always trying to get my support, and they sent me their literature. But I don't even hear of a damn one of them any more."

"It's all conjecture at this point," said Sheriff's Detective Ron Moya, a leader of the massive investigation. "There is nothing that ties Wiggins to any particular organization."

Wiggins, his mother, his halfbrother and stepfather (who has since died) have been charged in connection with the weapons finds that began Dec. 5 when shifting desert sands in northwestern Los Angeles County revealed a concrete arms storage bunker.

The only link — and a very tenuous one — to any organization whatsoever, say authorities, is the discovery that Wiggins once attended meetings held by the late Rev. Wesley Swift, a former Ku Klux Klan organizer.

The groups in general had the same purpose: to get ready for the day when Communists or civil rights activists would have to be fought to save the country.

For off-shore oil

Crews train in Cajun county

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — New England is coming to Cajun country to learn how to handle the jobs the offshore oil industry has provided for Louisiana for the last three decades.

A dozen young men will arrive from New Bedford, Mass., early in 1977 to begin a year of training and work at Louisiana oil ports, in preparation for the start of Atlantic Coast offshore drilling.

"Within two years, or just about the time Atlantic Coast offshore drilling is projected to be under way, New Bedford would have a skilled manpower cadre of between 150 and 200 young people already trained and oriented by the very same offshore logistics companies that will support oil production operations," said state Rep. Kevin Reilly, a Boston native, has been helping to set up the training program for the New Bedforders.

A dozen or more Massachusetts men will begin a year's training every three months on Louisiana's Gulf Coast, learning such basic skills as pipefitting, welding and boat handling and how to apply them to oil-field work.

Composers works set

NEW YORK (AP) — The chorus of the Newark Boys School has commissioned composers Gian-Carlo Menotti and Peter Mennin to write major works for the school, according to Terrence Shock, music director.

The commissions are "in tune with the old patronage idea that certain artists commissioned great composers to write things specifically for them," Shock said. The works will be about 30 minutes long and will probably be ready for a world premiere at the end of this year, he added.

A beehive is full of the bustle and buzz of thousands of bees. Some are busily making honey, and some are making small, six-sided wax cells to store it in.

To make its beeswax, the worker honeybee eats large quantities of honey. The wax oozes from eight wax pockets on the bee's body and dries into tiny white flakes.

As the wax flakes dry, the bee picks them off its body and chews the wax until it is soft and pliable.

Using its jaws, the bee shapes and molds the wax on the part of the honeycomb that it is building.

The perfect hexagons of wax fit together like bathroom tiles. Each cell is tilted slightly upward to prevent the honey from dripping out.

Most bees providing honey for your table live in hives built by beekeepers. But wild honeybees build their honeycombs in hollow trees or other hideaways that afford shelter for the colony.

I thought about you all year, Linus . . .

You never wrote to me or called me, but I still thought about you . . . do you think you love me?

Do you love me more than life itself?

Well, right now I'm thinking a lot about life . . .

Naked ride

Lady Godiva, according to the legend, rode naked through the streets of Coventry, England, in the 11th century to persuade her husband to lower taxes.

10 hard nosed questions to ask before you buy any motor home.

(And some straight answers from Winnebago.)

1. Is this motor home built by an experienced reputable manufacturer?

There's more to building a good motor home than putting a box on top of a truck chassis. Winnebago's experience and know-how have made it the best-selling brand in the U.S. We're also number one in repeat sales.

2. Do you have a good selection of sizes and models to choose from?

Some dealers have to push you into what they've got. But this year, Winnebago offers 6 different models and 15 floor plans. You can buy the motor home that fits your family.

3. Does this company have a program to upgrade vehicle safety?

Winnebago has one. It includes tough crash tests to prove the strength of our rugged Thermo-Steel® construction. We don't know anyone else who makes such tests.

4. Are parts and service readily available in all sections of the country?

You buy a motor home to go places. But can you get service in Florida as well as California? In Texas, Maine, Minnesota or Washington? Winnebago has some 450 service centers from coast to coast, even in Canada and Alaska. When you're on the road 500 miles from home, it's a mighty comforting thought.

5. Are you buying from a well-established, well-equipped dealer?

Winnebago dealers aren't here-today-gone-tomorrow outfits after a fast buck. They're experienced RV or automotive dealers, backed by full motor home service facilities and factory training programs.

6. Is there anyone beyond the dealer I can go to for satisfaction or help?

With Winnebago, you have a friend at the factory. Our Customer Relations Department is organized specifically to help you with questions, complaints or any special problems that may arise with your motor home.

7. What about protection after the sale?

No warranty or any other promise is any stronger than the company that stands behind it. The Winnebago Homeowner's Plan spells out our limited warranty and many more owner benefits that help protect both you and your investment. And we have both the corporate and dealer strength to back it up.

8. What will your motor home be worth five years from now?

In the past few years, dozens of motor home companies have gone out of business and dozens more have sprung up. When the time comes to sell or trade, "orphan" brands take a big beating on price. On the other hand, Winnebagos consistently bring top resale dollars.

9. Will I pay more for freight charges here than in other parts of the country?

Not if you buy a Winnebago anywhere in the continental U.S. or Canada. Winnebago's freight charge is only $100 and it's included in the selling price.

10. Does this motor home have a printed sticker price?

If it's a Winnebago it does. You get facts, not fancy talk from a Winnebago dealer. When you make a deal, you'll know the price is right. Make that deal right now and you'll do even better!

Names in the news

HOUSTON (AP) — Gerald R. Ford told 1,200 guests at a sports award dinner here that he was "speaking as an over-the-hill lineman — I said lineman, not politician."

Ford and his wife, Betty, flew here Thursday from Monterey, Calif., where the former president played in the Bing Crosby pro-amateur golf tournament.

Ford, who played football at the University of Michigan, praised the Vince Lombardi Award finalists during a $100 per plate dinner to announce the nation's outstanding college lineman.

ASPEN, Colo. (AP) — Claudine Longet should serve no more than 30 days in jail and should not be separated from her children for more than a day at a time, a probation officer says.

Officer Terry Norris said the 35-year-old French-born entertainer Miss Longet was "a very good candidate for probation" in her misdemeanor conviction in the shooting of her lover, Vladimir "Spider" Sabich last March.

Norris recommended Thursday that the state district court judge who will sentence Miss Longet on Monday should let her serve any jail term on non-consecutive days. Otherwise, he said, her three children by her ex-husband, singer Andy Williams, would have to return to California temporarily.

The maximum penalty for criminally negligent homicide is two years in prison and a $5,000 fine. The prosecution had sought a reckless manslaughter conviction, a felony, but a 12-member jury chose the lesser charge.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A bit of dialogue on last Sunday's episode of the television situation comedy "Phyllis" failed to amuse San Francisco Supervisor Bob Mendelsohn, his family and his aides.

The latest installment of the CBS-TV show, which stars Cloris Leachman as an assistant to a San Francisco supervisor, included mention of a supervisor named Mendelsohn, who was characterized as "fooling around with his secretary."

"I couldn't believe it," the real Mendelsohn said Thursday. "A so-called professional network and show ... how could they do a thing like that?"

Mendelsohn said people started ribbing him immediately, "and several at City Hall made facetious comments. Both my female aides were insulted, as were their families."

A spokesman for Mary Tyler Moore Enterprises, which produces the show, said the reference to a real San Francisco supervisor was an "accident ... merely coincidental."

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — Retired western actor Randolph Scott has been released from the Mayo Clinic after 10 days of tests.

After his release Thursday, he said he was returning to Beverly Hills.

During his stay, Scott turned 79. He said he received dozens of cards and notes and that he was "very touched and moved" by them.

Scott made 180 western and adventure films during his career. He said he had come to the clinic periodically since the 1930s for checkups.

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — Captain Kidd, the infamous 17th Century pirate, was really a bumbling buccaneer whose buried treasures don't exist, says a University of California historian.

The purportedly roguish 17th-century Scottish sea captain who was hanged in London lacked even "the killer instinct to be an effective pirate," says Dr. Robert C. Ritchie, who sums up:

"The fact is, Captain Kidd is basically a nice guy."

Ritchie, an associate professor of history at UC San Diego, has traveled to England a half-dozen times in 10 years of research on William Kidd.
